BRITISH CABINET MAY ORDER RESUMPTION OF DEBT FUNDING

Washington Officials Expect Britain To Accept American Proposals — Congressmen To Reply To Baldwin's Charge of Playing Politics—More "Unfavorable Comment" Is Expected

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 — An early decision by the British cabinet authorizing Sir Auckland Geddes to resume negotiations over the funding of the $5,000,000,000 British debt is expected by officials here.

Government officials who are watching closely the reception being accorded the American terms in England said today they did not expect immediate acceptance or rejection of the proposal carried back to England by Chancellor Baldwin.

The opinion nevertheless prevails in official quarters here that ultimately the British cabinet will accept the American terms, or something very closely akin to them, altho a great deal more negotiating probably will be necessary.

Meanwhile it appeared probable today that there will be some unfavorable comment in congress on opinions expressed by Chancellor Baldwin on his return home, and also upon the fact that the American settlement plan was announced from London and not in Washington.

Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, and Senator Harris, Democrat, Georgia, both of whom have frequently complained in speeches against the "secrecy" of the debt funding negotiations, probably will reply to the British chancellor's characterizing of congressmen as "politicians."

CHURCH OF CHRIST REVIVAL ENTERS ITS FINAL WEEK

The final week of the Church of Christ revival services was started Sunday. There were three conversions during the day, and one person joined the church by letter.

Baptismal services were held in the afternoon when a number of new members were baptized.

Rev. M. L. Buckley preached in the evening on "The Change of Heart." He said his experience in conversions was different from most people's and that no man's experience should be the test to judge others by. He said the Bible does not tell how a man must feel, but it does tell what he must do.

"After all becoming a Christian is a matter of faith and obedience. People that walk by faith are pleasing God. The Bible promises the forgiveness of sins and the gift of the Holy Spirit, to all those who penitently believe and obey."

Monday evening Rev. Buckley will preach on "What will you do with Jesus?" and Tuesday evening his subject will be "Remember Lot's Wife."

30 COSHOCTON PEOPLE ATTEND FARMERS' MEET

Approximately thirty interested people from this county have gone to Columbus Monday and many will go Tuesday to attend the activities of Farmers' Week in Columbus all this week.

E. C. Darling and George Stonehocker, representatives of the local Coshocton-co farm bureau will go to Columbus Tuesday as delegates to the state farm bureau meeting, which is being held in connection with Farmers' Week.

County Agent G. C. Musgrove, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Croy, of Trinway and Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Croy, will leave Tuesday to attend the state farm bureau meeting and Farmers' Week.

SEEK RELATIVES OF DYING WOMEN

CINCINNATI, Jan. 29—Authorities are endeavoring to locate relatives of two young women dying at the General hospital as the result of injuries sustained in an auto accident.

They registered as Laura Moore, 23, of north Pennsylvania-av, Indianapolis, Ind., and Catherine Davis, 24, of this city.

SUBSIDY BILL AND FARM CREDITS HIT SNAG IN CONGRESS

President's Pet Bill Has Slight Chance, Tho Final Effort Is Expected

FIVE WEEKS MORE

Norbeck's Insistence On Substitute May Kill Credits Legislation

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Congress today entered the home stretch of its long race. In exactly five weeks the present congress dies with numerous important problems still undecided.

Paramountly from the administration's point of view, remains the ship subsidy bill, which apparently has successfully and permanently been sidetracked by legislative jockeying by its opponents.

The bill's supporters themselves believe that to force the bill to a vote would mean its certain death, for the personnel of the new congress will be more antagonistic to the bill than the present.

What hope the administration held for passage of the merchant marine has practically vanished with the new complexities of the farm credits situation in the senate. A few days ago every indication pointed to clear sailing for the Lenroot-Anderson bill and there was ample reason to believe it would pass this week. Now passage seems remote as a result of the announcement of Senator Norbeck of North Dakota that he would insist on his $150,000,000 as a substitute for the measure sponsored by the administration. Norbeck has the support of the farm bloc and the agriculture committee, whose members feel the bill more adequately fills the needs of the farmers, for it provides greater market facilities, held to be more essential than domestic credits.

This bill provides for financing operations of foreign purchases of American farm products under the administration of the war finance corporation.

Such leaders as Norris, Republican, Nebraska, chairman of the agriculture committee, and Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, are ready to go along with Norbeck to any limit in securing favorable action on the bill.

While the new farm credits fight is smouldering, another class per-

MAIL CARRIER IN RUNAWAY

Charles Clark, of New Guilford, mail carrier on Walhonding Route 1, received an injury he believes to be a fracture of a rib and other bruises, Monday morning at 7:30 o'clock when the horse he was driving to a buggy became frightened and ran away, just as Clark was starting on his route.

The horse became frightened when an axle broke on his buggy. When the horse plunged, Clark was thrown out and the buggy was demolished.

Clark returned to his home, obtained another horse and buggy, and carried his mail route.

TAKES POISON WHEN SHE LEARNS OF HER HUSBAND'S INJURIES

STEUBENVILLE, Jan. 29—Receiving word that her husband had been injured in a mill accident, Mrs. Dora Waltz, 29, swallowed five bi-chloride of mercury tablets last night. She is in a dying condition at a local hospital. Her husband, Fred Waltz, 22, is in the same hospital suffering from injuries and says he does not want to live if his wife dies.

The report reaching Mrs. Waltz of her husband's injuries was greatly exaggerated. After brooding for an hour the woman retired to her bedroom and swallowed the poison tablets. She reached the hospital shortly after her husband. Physicians are now endeavoring to save the two lives.

More File Road Tax Protests

Three more cases to enjoin the collection of special assessments against owners of property in Franklin-tp, for the improvement of the inter-county highway from Coshocton to Conesville, had been filed in common pleas court Monday.

The plaintiffs in the three cases are J. C. Cassner, Minnie M. Casner and Guy Rodgers.

J. C. Casner owns 2.67 acres of land, which he says has been assessed $77.94. Minnie M. Casner ownes 8¼ acres, which has been assessed $100, and Guy Rodgers owns 17 acres of land which he says had been assessed at $202.51. The land of all three plaintiffs is located on the west side of the river.

In each case the assessment is declared to be in excess of the benefits derived from the improvement of the road. The court is asked to determine the benefit derived by the land owners, and to regulate the assessment accordingly.

L. N. Staats represents the plaintif in each of the three actions.

FIRE BELIEVED WORK OF KU KLUX

NEW RICHMOND, O., Jan. 29—State fire officials are investigating the total destruction by fire early today of the hardware store of Mrs. E. R. Townsend here. Several days ago Mrs. Townsend said she received a letter signed "K. K. K." warning her that if certain conditions about the store were not changed the place would be burned.

HUSBAND AND WIFE MURDERED IN NEWPORT

Frazier McLeish, World War veteran, an dhis wife caretakers on the Newport (Rhode Island) estate of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fitz Simmons, of New York, were brutally murdered in their lodge and the home set on fire. There is no clue to the murderers. Before her marriage to Lieutenant Fitz Simons, of the Navy, Mrs. Fitz Simons was Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt.

TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR HUSBAND WHO WOULD AVOID DOMESTIC SQUABBLES

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—Ten points on how a man may be happy tho married were made public today by the legal aid society under the title of "Domestic Relations Decalogue."

The legal aid society, which provides free legal advice to the poor, camo to its conclusions after handling thousands of domestic trouble cases.

The points are:

1. Be generous to your wife, according to your means.
2. Do not interfere with a woman in the management of purely domestic affairs.
3. Be cheerful, even tho you find it hard sometimes.
4. Be considerate, for the average woman is just a bundle of nerves.
5. Make love to your wife; continue to be her sweetheart.
6. Don't scold or find fault.
7. Establish your own home, if possible, away from your wife's and your own families.
8. Don't keep any "star boarders."
9. Cultivate neatness and personal cleanliness.
10. Be kind and just to your children.

STORM BREAKS IN RUHR WITH VIOLENCE; RAILWAYS TIED UP

200,000 German Workers Are Idle—Entire Basin Isolated By Strikes—French Commander Declares Martial Law—Tracks Torn Up, Property Destroyed, Wires Cut

COBLENZ, Jan. 29. — German railways in the Coblenz area were tied up by strikers today.

Traffic is paralyzed. German railroaders sent thirteen of the best locomotives into the unoccupied part of Germany.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 29.—There are approximately 200,000 German men and women workers idle today in the Rhineland and Ruhr as the result of strikes or shutdowns due to fuel shortage and paralysis of rail and water transportation, said a dispatch from Essen.

French military guards have been established over all railroads leading out of the Ruhr as the result of train wrecking attempts.

Violence was reported from some quarters, but for the most part, the occupied territory was calm over the week end.

BLACKS AND WHITES BATTLE IN INDIANA TOWN TWO KILLED

BLANFORD, Ind., Jan. 29.—Tension gripped this city today as the authorities prepared to prevent further anti black demonstrations.

Two unidentified men were killed early today and two others wounded, including Sheriff Harry Newland, during a clash between a posse and a group of miners.

The men who were killed were Serbian miners. The outbreak came as a climax to more than a week of tension, which had existed since an attack on a 12-year-old white girl.

The assault was followed by a warning to all the negro miners to leave the county. Trouble developed early this morning, when a group of miners attending a dance, inflamed with liquor, fired several shots into a store conducted by negroes, who were invoicing stock.

A posse was rushed to the scene. Shooting broke forth. The outbreak was not quelled until two miners fell dead.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 29.—A demand that federal authorities clear up Blanford, Ind., so-called "Worst town in America" where saloons were said to have run wide open with few interruptions since prohibition began, was made by Gov. Warren T. McCray today following the wounding early this morning of Sheriff Harry Newland and the killing of two Serbians.

RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA IS HELD IMPRACTICABLE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—Soviet Russia has not improved either politically or economically to a point where American recognition is practicable or desirable, it was officially stated today at the state department.

The statement was made in response to an inquiry addressed to Secretary Hughes as to whether Russia had made any material advance toward fulfilling the conditions of recognition laid down by him a year ago.

100 GIRLS CAUGHT IN DANCE HALL BY DANGEROUS BLAZE

HOBOKEN, N. J., Jan. 29.—Frantic with fright, their eyes blinded by smoke, 100 girls stood screaming at the front windows of a dance hall on the second floor early today when they were trapped by a blaze which started on the first floor.

Many of them were prevented from jumping only by the strenuous efforts of their escorts.

Four hundred men and women were in the hall when the first wisp of smoke curled its way up the stairs.

All but 100 were able to leave by the exits but the dense smoke barred the way for the rest. They were clad in flimsy ball gowns and fought to get to the windows until employees of the place secured ladders and aided them to the street.

Shortly after the last of the dancers had been led to safety flames burst thru the ceiling and into the dance hall.

HERE ARE FACTS OF VALUE IN FRAMING INCOME TAX RETURN

Arrival of the period for filing income tax returns—January 1 to March 15, 1923—presents to American citizens and residents the question, "Am I required to file a return?" and "How shall I be assured of making a correct return?"

To every person who last year filed a return will be sent a form for making a return of income for the year 1922—Form 1040A for reporting net income of $5,000 and less, and Form 1040 for reporting net income in excess of $5,000. Careful study of the instructions on these forms will solve many difficulties which, at first glance, may seem perplexing.

As a further aid, the Bureau of internal revenue has prepared a series of newspaper statements based on the latest rulings and decisions governing the administration of the revenue act. Answers to the questions, which from the bureau's correspondence during the last year appear perplexing, will be presented daily. Taxpayers are advised to preserve these articles

DRESDEN GIRL MISSING FROM HOME MONDAY

Dresden police were unable late Monday afternoon to locate Miss Vera Anderson, aged 16, daughter of Preston Anderson, of Dresden, who is claimed to have disappeared from her home Sunday morning at 8 o'clock.

The father believes that his daughter left home in company of Richard Falkner, aged 26, an employe of the Billiter & Oliver Co., which has been engaged in road construction work in the Dresden vicinity. Falkner is said to live in Williamstown, Ky.

The parents of the grl are undecided as to the conditions under which she left Dresden. They believe that she went with Falkner, but are uncertain as to his intentions toward the girl. Should the couple get married nothing will be done in the matter, it was learned, but should they stay in this state without being married a charge of delinquency will be filed against

REV. RYAN RESIGNS CHARGE, RETURNS TO WEST VIRGINIA

Rev. A. S. Ryan, who has been acting as pastor of the Seventh st Christian church for the past four months, has resigned, and Monday morning returned to his home in West Virginia.

Altho pleased with his position here, Rev. Ryan was unable to bring his family to Coshocton, and he finally decided to return to them. His son is in poor health and it was feared the change in residence might prove fatal to him.

No one has been engaged to take his place in the local church. Efforts were being made Monday to obtain a pastor temporarily, until some arrangement can be made to supply the pulpit.

PREPARATIONS FOR NEW WAR BEING MADE IN NEAR EAST

Greeks Mass 75,000 Soldiers, Armed By British, For Attack On Turks — Constantinople Now Held By Allies May Be Object Of Turk Seige—Russo-Turk Alliance Formed

LAUSANNE, Jan. 29. — The allies terms were handed to the Turks today. As no time limit was set, it will be possible to reopen negotiations after the Angora government has studied the terms.

TOULON, France, Jan. 29. —Orders were received today for the French cruiser Strasburg to proceed at once to the Near East. Flotillas of torpedo boats and submarines are being prepared for service in Turkish waters.

PARIS, Jan. 29. — Preparations were in full swing today for another war in the Near East. According to advices received from various sources hostilities may be expected immediately if the Near East peace conference at Lausanne breaks down.

A Belgrade dispatch to the Matin says that George Tchitcherin, head of the Russian delegation at Lausanne, and Ismet Pasha, leader of the Turks, have drawn up a Russo-Turkish military alliance. According to this source, Russia promises to give Turkey active assistance by sending troops to Mesopotamia and by holding Roumania neutral by massing forces on the Bessarabian frontier.

HARVEY ARRIVES; READY TO REPORT ON DEBT FUNDING

Cabinet And Press Is Divided On Acceptance of 3 Per Cent Rate

BALDWIN PRAISED

Ambassador Refuses To Confirm Statement that U. S. Will Not Intervene

LONDON, Jan. 29. — George Harvey, American ambassador to Great Britain, who was recalled to report to the United States government on European affairs, arrived from Washington today and announced that he is ready to advise on the Anglo-American debt negotiations if his services are desired.

Ambassador Harvey refused to discuss the British debt issue in detail, nor would he disclose what part he will play in future negotiations.

"I am ready to advise if called upon," he said.

The ambassador was questioned about the statement he was reported to have made that the United States is "damned well out of European affairs."

"Oh, I cannot say anything about that," he replied, but gave the indication that he had been correctly quoted.

Harvey was fulsome in his praise of Stanley Baldwin, chancellor of the British exchequor who headed the British debt funding mission to Washington.

Mr. Baldwin made a good impression in the United States, he said.

"A better man could not have been chosen for the work. He appealed to the American sentiment as no other English diplomat has done since Lord Brice. Nothing but good can result from the Anglo-American negotiations as they were handled by the chancellor of the exchequer."

The British cabinet will meet tomorrow to hear a detailed report on the Washington negotiations from Chancellor Baldwin. It is likely Harvey's views will be sought by the cabinet in order to balance them against the opinions expressed by the British official.

There are indications the cabinet will have a difficult time reaching a decision. The press is divided, some urging rejection, others acceptance of the American

PANGLE SEEKS STATE DRY JOB

Carl Pangle, formerly constable here, who is seeking the appointment of state prohibition enforcement officer, has been endorsed by the local W. C. T. U., the Ministerial Association, Coshocton-co Dry Enforcement League and by Mayor W. S. Tish.

Samuel Cardwell, chairman of the local Democratic executive committee, announced Monday that the County Democratic executive committee will not endorse any applicants in the position of prohibition enforcement officers unless the applicants first obtain the endorsement of the various dry organizations of this county.

HEAVY CALENDAR MARKS OPENING OF LEGISLATURE

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29. -- An active week in the state legislature is expected when the legislators reconvene here this evening.

Numerous committee meetings are scheduled for consideration of important bills pending.

The house taxation committee will consider the taxation code. They will also take up the gasoline tax bills. The senate utilities committee will hold a public hearing Tuesday night on the Bender bill, seeking abolition of the state utilities commission.

MRS. MARY CLARK, FORMER DRESDEN RESIDENT, DIES

Mrs. John McCullough of 317 south Ninth-st, received a telegram today notifying her of the death of Mrs. Mary Clark, aged 70, of Logan, Ohio, formerly a resident of Dresden.

The telegram did not give the time of Mrs. Clark's death or the nature of her illness, but it is presumed by relatives here that her death was caused by infirmities of age.

Mrs. Clark had often visited in Coshocton and years ago was known to many older residents of the city.

Her husband, George Clark, died several years ago. She leaves one son, C. H. Clark of Logan, and a sister, Mrs. Rachael Moore of Coshocton. Will and Carl Darling of Warsaw are nephews.

Funeral services will be conducted at Logan Wednesday at 10 o'clock. The body will be placed in a vault there, where it will remain until spring, when it will be brot to Dresden for burial.

MISSING MAN'S FAMILY TO MAKE UP LOST FUNDS

NEW YORK, Jan. 29— While detectives all over the United States are seeking Mortimer E. Lautman, Pittsburgh department store official who disappeared with $50,000 and against whom a charge of grand larceny has been preferred, his brother Dr. Lautman, of Brooklyn scouted the idea that he had absconded with funds belonging to others.

"I will say that I and the members of my family personally will make good whatever amounts are involved," said Dr. Lautman.

He asserted that at the moment his brother had a [illegible] in a Brooklyn bank more than sufficient to cover the amount charged against him.

A hastily constructed dragnet is in operation along the Canadian border and at all west coast points. He is reported to have been seen boarding a west-bound train at the Grand Central station here Thursday evening.

Detectives are watching steamships departing to the orient, as Lautman's business often took him there in the past.

In information furnished to police, it is claimed that Lautman was given $20,000 for the purchase of stock in the business and th[illegible] he had neither delivered the sto[illegible] nor returned the money.

DAILY NEWS LETTER

General News and Gossip from Staff Writers At Home and Abroad

HARRISBURG, Jan. 29—Altho the capital city of Pennsylvania is a considerable distance from the coal belt, there is no place of its size in the country where they worry less about the scarcity of anthracite—not to mention its high price. For Harrisburg, situated on the Susquehanna River, is the headquarters for the largest coal fleet known in the country. Not that coal fleets to challenge the size of the local one are plentiful, for there are only two rivers in the world where such fuel is obtained from dredging. The one is the Susquehanna and the other is the Lehigh.

Coal fleets here have been increasing rapidly in size during the last few years. This year, however, for the first time in their history they are working after having been tied up for the winter.

It always had been customary at the approach of ice for their owners to anchor them in secluded spots about the numerous islands here, where they would receive a minimum of buffeting when the ice went out. The ice moved from the river here early this month, and the next day owners of the fleet had large numbers of men working to get the diggers into shape for action. Since then they have been pumping away just the same as in the summer, altho landing the cargo is now a trifle more precarious.

The coal industry here had its inception in the men who, with long-handled scoop shovels and small boats, obtained the Winter's fuel supply from the bottom of the river. Such methods necessarily were confined to periods when the water was at very low stages. At that time only the larger sizes were taken from the water. Then various mechanical geniuses rigged up home-made steam-driven diggers, which whirled the coal from the bottom of the deepest holes to flats alongside the digger boat.

There always has been some controversy concerning who first adopted the methods now used, but regardless of who was the first, he was soon flattered by a lot of imitators. There also is controversy about which town on the Susquehanna first started obtaining coal with power pumps, but in a few years every place where the river was deep enough to permit operation and landing of the boats boasted a coal fleet.

In the early days of the river "mining" the coal was more or less a drug on the market, at $1 a ton delivered. Then manufacturing concerns began to install blower systems, which permitted the burning of the coal alone, and found they were saving huge amounts on their coal bills. The demand increased until the $2-a-ton price and more was reached. Installation of minor blower systems in homes helped to increase the demand. The price at the riverbank is now $3 a ton, and the fleet owners say that figure is evidence of their desire not to profiteer, despite the coal strike, which has made anthracite, even in regions where it is mined, so scarce that it has been seized as it stood on cars at the colliery sidings.

To use the river coal in homes it is necessary to install an electrically-driven motor which furnishes forced draft. The coal is small and will not burn otherwise. Best results are obtained with the outfit by wiring a thermostat in the blower circuit. The thermostat permits the householder to fix the temperature at which he wants his house kept and then let it regulate the blower, for a river coal fire if left to itself will die quickly. The entire outfit costs only $60, and the average householder saves much more than that on the winter's fuel bill by burning the river coal.

For the men who have large sums invested in the coal digging fleets and the machinery which handles it as well as the householder who has spent his money for a forced draft system, there is the usual "fly in the ointment."

The supply of coal now in the river came from huge culm banks and the washeries along streams which empty into it.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 29—Will a solution of the automobile problem come through careful training of the upcoming generation?

Chief of Police Daniel O'Brien and Captain Henry Gleeson, the city's traffic expert, believe that in such training lies the solution of the ever-increasing problem of speeding motor cars and carelessness on the part of pedestrians.

The board of education thinks so well of the plan that they have agreed to co-operate with O'Brien and Gleeson in testing the idea in San Francisco public schools.

The police officials plan the organization within the schools of the Public School Traffic Reserve. The plan will embrace all grammar schools and include all pupils. They will be thoroughly instructed as to the reasons for care against accidents from vehicular traffic.

The course will educate the members of the organization in the control of street traffic, both vehicular and pedestrian.

A knowledge and practice of all safety first laws and regulations will be given.

The Traffic Reserve will have a semi-military organization being divided into fifty companies, commanded by a colonel, staff officers and five battalion majors. The course outlined by O'Brien and Gleeson will include control of vehicular and pedestrian traffic at street intersections and upon streets between street intersections, the knowledge and use of the traffic whistle and hand signals used by the police department, the control of students in vicinity of schools and the proper methods of safety when crossing streets.

Captain Gleeson believes that not only will the future generation benefit, but that traffic accidents will be materially decreased immediately. Children, he points out, are to a large extent victims of traffic accidents in the streets of the larger cities. He believes it is possible to reach and interest parents through the children. The experiment will be watched by other cities with great interest and, if a success here, may be expected to spread all over the United States.

"At home" days of welcome to all friends of the Army, during which barracks will be open for the entertainment of relatives and friends of enlisted men, are to be held at stated intervals. On these days concerts are to be given, and the officers and their families will entertain informally. Special events and demonstrations are to be planned for the edification of the visitors. An Army Day is planned for the fall of 1923 which will exhibit a complete demonstration of army activities, accompanied by social events in the way of luncheons, entertainments, games, receptions and banquets.

A new game species has been added to the fauna of California, already famous for the successful introduction of various food fishes. This time, instead of being a fish, it is the bullfrog, source of the delectable "frog's legs" viands heretofore accessible largely to the Easterner. For some time "frog farms" have been a success in a commercial way, and now Professor Tracy I. Storer, of the University of California, tells of the successful introduction of the bullfrog into the ponds of the state for the edification of the hunter.

A rapid increase of frogs in several locations where they have been introduced through efforts of the state fish and game commission, according to Professor Storer, makes it probable that ere many years the frog angler, with his hook baited with red flannel, will be a familiar sight along many streams, and the frog hunter, with his small-bore gun and shot cartridges, will attract the attention of the game wardens.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr Edwards Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

GUN FIGHT COSTS POLICEMAN'S LIFE; ASSAILANT DYING

DAYTON, Jan 29 -Patrolman George E Clark, died early today and Daniel McDermott, 29, negro, is dying as the result of an early morning gun fight, which followed when Clark ordered McDermott to throw up his hands. Clark and a companion officer were hunting a burglar at the time. The negro responded to the command by drawing a knife. Then shooting began.

Patrick J Roach, Clark's companion, joined in the firing from the opposite side of the street.

McDermott made his get-a-way and boarded a street car but toppled over.

A blood transfusion operation was performed last night to save Clark but it was unsucessful.

No gun was found on McDermott, who explained his resistance by saying he thot the officer was a holdup man.

FARM WEEK OPENS AT STATE COLLEGE

Student Committee of 600 Helps Handle First Of Rural Visitors; 6,000 Are Expected

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29. — Farmers' Week opened at 9:00 this morning on the campus of Ohio State University. Registration during the early hours ran about even with that of last year, when the end of the week showed a total of 6,120 farm people to have come in for a day or more of the week to the University.

Early arrivals found student committeemen on hand to assign them to rooms, and to guide them there. As an innovation this year, this committee of 600 is active as registration clerks, guides, ushers and the like. More than 800 rooms in Columbus residences have been listed as available for country people who want to stay over for one or more nights of the week.

Another innovation of this, the eleventh annual Farmers' Week, is a newspaper show which opened this morning with 75 weekly-semi-weekly, and daily papers entered. Bristow Adams of Cornell University is judging the various classes. Winners will be awarded ribbons this afternoon and Ohio editors and correspondents will discuss the awards at an open Newspaper Round Table, terminating in a journalism banquet tonight.

Twenty-eight of the 233 events of the week are scheduled today. At 11 this morning, W. O. Thompson, president of the University made the formal address of welcome. Later in the week he is to speak on, "The Standard of Living for Rural People."

L. L. Rummell spoke at 10 this morning on the need of better-bred livestock in Ohio. He stressed the fact that at present prices only a purebred dairy heifer will bring enough to pay for raising her.

SUBSIDY BILL

haps even more bitter, looms when the army supply bill is reported, either Tuesday or Wednesday. It is expected efforts will be made to have this measure temporarily displace rural relief bills.

Senate's small army group wants to cut down the size of the personnel and slash the rivers and harbors appropriations. This may precipitate another long and involved discussion of foreign relations, for to the measure Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, may attach his resolution authorizing the president to call a world economic conference.

At any rate the Idaho senator has served notice he will bring the resolution before the senate this week. When he does that the "bitter enders" and the "irreconcilables" are prepared to discuss at considerable length the administration's policy with respect to reparations problems.

Once the foreign relations discussion begins, there is no telling how many days it may continue. Democrats may use it as an excuse to delay action on the army bill, and the ship subsidy.

Two attempts to restrict debate on the shipping bill have blocked. It is not believed another effort will be made for Senator Brookhart has announced he is "ready to read enough scriptures to talk the bill to death, if necessary."

The chances now are that the administration leaders will not try to bring up the shipping bill until the last few days of the session when a final endeavor will be made to jam it thru with night sessions.

STORM

Ruhr basin with its coal fields and industries was completely isolated today.

General DeGoutte, French commander in chief has issued a proclamation tightening the state of siege into actual martial law in all cities held by the French and Belgians.

German officials regard DeGoutte's action as a move to break down completely German resistance.

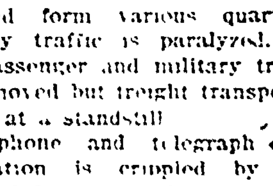
Serious property destruction was reported form various quarters. Railway traffic is paralyzed. A few passenger and military trains were moved but freight transportation is at a standstill.

Telephone and telegraph communication is crippled by the strike of German employees.

Berlin sent word that appeals for assistance were being sent out for the German strikers in the Rhineland. It is questioned however, whether the French military authorities will allow food trains to enter the Ruhr so long as the German workers defy the occupational forces with strikes.

French officials claim that German civilian officials are encouraging disorders. Violence has spread from the Westphalian coal and industrial zones southward to other areas taken over by the French long ago.

Representatives of the German mine owners declare that no coal is being moved into Belgium or France, owing to strikes of miners and railway men. French railway workers who have been sent into the Ruhr are practically helpless. Railway tracks have been torn up and telegraph wires cut, preventing traffic.



Now let a cold get a hold!

WOMEN HAVE TOPICS ON FARM WK. PROG.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 29. — The women of the farm haven't been overlooked on the program for eleventh annual Ohio Farmers' Week, which opens at Ohio State University Monday morning. Nor must they make their interests where those of their husbands are.

Seventeen women speakers are scheduled to talk on feminine conceits ranging from clothes, hats, sewing, music and community building to canning, candy making, common tasks and care of the teeth. A paper that is also attracting the covert attention of the men is on the program for Thursday morning. Under the interrogation, "Why Marry a Farmer?" Miss Bess Row, assistant editor of Farmers' wife, St. Paul, Minn., will reveal the reactions of farm mothers to a recently circulated questionnaire intended to determine whether farm mothers want their daughters to marry farmers.

Farm women will be received during the week both by Mrs. Victor A. Donahey in the governor's mansion and by Mrs. W. O. Thompson, in the president's home on the Ohio State University campus.

Home Economics girls will conduct a human check room in which they will care for children while mothers attend meetings and exhibits. Trained nurses, experienced lady leaders and guides to page mothers if necessary make up the retinue in charge of the human checking service.

Farm week managers expect close to 6500 farm folk to attend programs which include 250 lectures, demonstrations, organization meetings and open forums, to be conducted by 177 specialists. Anticipating a great influx of automobiles, officials have arranged for storage of machines in the immense sheltered space under the stands of the new Ohio Stadium.

Visitors will see the University in full operation for the first time in the eleven years history of Ohio Farmers' Week. Students in the college of agriculture will stage a stunt night as an entertainment feature of opening day. They will volunteer their services as ushers and guides during the balance of the week.

The second annual old time country fiddlers contest will be a feature of Friday afternoon.

General interest is being manifested in the daily open forums, to be conducted by Prof. T. N. Carver, Harvard University economist, and an opportunity for dirt farmers to air their views on credits, production and co-operative marketing. Professor Carver will sum up preceding discussions on Friday with an address on "The Outlook for the American Farmer."

OHIO HIGH SCHOOLS ENROLL 175,000

Thirty out of every thousand people in Ohio were enrolled in public high schools last year, according to figures just made public. In 1917, the last year in which figures are available for the country as a whole, the national ratio was only 15.6 out of every thousand. Ohio's gain in high school enrollment over a year ago is 23,764; the total for 1922 reached the remarkable figure of 175,473. In ten years high school attendance has more than doubled.

In spite of the fact that the boys constitute 55 per cent of the high school enrollment. There were 11,000 more girls than boys in high school last year.

The total public school enrollment now amounts to 1,160,000.

NINE MEN INJURED THREE FATALLY IN GAS TANK BLOW-OUT

CHICAGO, Jan. 29 — Nine men were injured and scalded and hundreds of families were thrown into freight by a terrific explosion today in the plant of the Chicago By products Coke Co.

Death threatens three of the injured.

Eleven other workers narrowly escaped with their lives.

An illuminating gas generator tank blew up. The neighborhood was in confusion following a pop and a roar heard all over Chicago. Smoke and steam enveloped the district for blocks. Clanging ambulances and police patrols grouped thru the haze. Street cars, elevated trains and autos were forced to slow down or stop entirely because of the artificial fog.

Buildings trembled for a mile around and many windows were broken. Some of their occupants, fearing an earthquake, ran into the icy streets. Half a dozen police stations sent men in automobiles when several reports stated many had been killed. The building, 150 by 350 feet in which the blast occurred, was damaged to the extent of from $10,000 to $15,000.

The blowing out of a gasket was believed by company officials to have caused the blast.

NORMAN'S TEAM WINS IN KEENE PIGEON SHOOT

Proctor Norman's clay pigeon shooters won over Robert Dudgeon's shooters in Norman's field, near Keene, Saturday afternoon. Both teams are from Keene.

Norman's outfit won by seventeen points.

The losing side will give a fish supper in the basement of the Keene high school Wednesday evening for the winning side.

Glen Williams, on Dudgeon's side, claimed high score. He broke 21 pigeons out of 25 trials.

This was the second time that Norman's men has won over Dudgeon's crew.

TO USE OHIO STADIUM AS FARM WK. GARAGE

Those who motor to Columbus for Farmers' Week, Jan. 29-Feb. 2, this year may store their cars under the immense new stadium, and save garage storage bills.

Making this announcement, Ohio State University officials point out that the space under the stands is completely protected from the weather, with the ground hardpacked and dry, and that thousands of cars can be driven in and parked with entire safety. University watchmen will be on the post day and night, to watch the cars.

THE BAT

Wagenhals & Kemper's production of "The Bat," by Mary Roberts Rinehart and Avery Hopwood will be presented here on Monday, February 5, by a brilliant cast.

This is the play, conceded by all, to be the greatest success in years. This is the play about which there has been more discussion than any other play produced in a generation or more.

"The Bat" comes here with a remarkable record for popularity. It has played for more than two years at the Morosco theatre, New York. Simultaneously, another company broke every existing theatrical record in Chicago by playing for more than one year there. In addition "The Bat" is now the sensation of London. Those are the facts to conjure with.

Self praise, however, as the saying runs, goes but a little ways. For that reason the management defers its own judgment of "The Bat" to that of the critics of New York and Chicago who were unanimous in their enthusiasm over the play. Brief excerpts from some of the criticisms follow.

"The best mystery play New York has ever seen."—Telegram.

"A wild mystery melodrama, considerably wilder than any seen in these parts for a long time—thoroughly interesting and immensely amusing."—The Times.

"Keeps standees on the tips of their toes."—The World.

"Baffling, exciting and a succession of thrills with interludes of comedy that were greeted with shrieks of laughter."—Tribune.

"Has never been equalled for baffling and delirious thrills.—The Globe.

And these that follow are from Chicago:

"Thrill after thrill, with everybody fooled to the top of the bent— one sensation after another." — Daily News.

"A play of sweeping movement, sudden turn, quick surprise and astounding solution."—Journal.

This, then is "The Bat."

CINDERELLA WILL RUN VAUDEVILLE

The management of the Cinderella announces "Jazz Week" at that theatre all this week.

Keith's Broadway Entertainers, a singing and musical combination will furnish the music at the theatre all this week. This is the first time the Cinderella has ever run vaudeville.

Among the members of the orchestra that will entertain will be Jack Reader, the trap-drummer and a former resident of this city. Mr. Reader will put on a speciality of singing and dancing.

This is the same orchestra that appeared at the Casino dance hall in Newcomerstown last Monday night.

"MR. BOB" WILL BE GIVEN BY STUDENTS OF HIGH SCHOOL

From all indications the high school comedy, "Mr. Bob," which is to be given by Coshocton high school students Wednesday night, will be a huge success.

Seats were selling rapidly Monday with indications of a heavy seat sale for the night of the performance. This is the first high school play of this year and likely will be well attended.

Miss Mary Barrick plays the title role of Mr. Bob. She is ably assisted by the remainder of the cast: Katherine, a niece to Aunt Becky, Lucille Ashman; Phillip, a nephew, Roe Hull; the butler, Ronald McCormick; the maid, Daisy Harris; Mr. Brown, a man who is taken for several characters and Aunt Becky, Hazel Hershman.

A brief outline of the plot follows: Aunt Becky wants to turn her home into a barn for cats. Her niece and nephew utterly oppose this idea. Their aunt has also engaged an architect to plan the second floor for the "catery." Katherine, the niece is expecting her college chum, Marion, better known as Mr. Bob. Phillip, her cousin, thinks that Bob is a young man and actually mistakes Mr. Brown for him. Phillip is a sailor and he and his aunt finally agree to give up their pet hobbies. Phillip was expecting to participate in a yacht race. Mr. Bob takes Phillip's yacht and wins the race. Aunt Becky finally gets to keep her cats.

The butler and the maid furnish much comedy in the play. The play as a whole is amusing and entertaining.

A computing device doing the work of a slide rule with circular plates has been designed that is small enough to be clamped to a desk, a magnifying glass aiding in reading its figures.

Financial Letter

By JAMES B. CLEWS

WALL STREET, N. Y., Jan. 29—The "waiting attitude" which has been distinctly in evidence since the middle of January became even more pronounced in the trading and investment market during the past week. Foreign policies has been in a condition which has strongly tended to prevent the smaller investor from committing himself far in advance, while there has also been uncertainty as to the degree in which domestic conditions would be likely to suffer in a reflex way from disturbances abroad. In consequence, there has been a kind of "deadlock" between opposing elements in the market with the result that prices have been not far from stationary.

Foreign Conditions Unsettled

Conditions growing out of France's advance in the Ruhr are proving to be of broader scope and significance than had been anticipated by some. Financially speaking, France's action has tended to impair the status of exchange and of foreign currencies and, of course, to cast doubt upon the future of our export trade. Nevertheless, it is true that, as observed a week ago, there are factors in the outlook which tend for the time being at least to enlarge export trade, due to the transference of orders which has taken place in some quarters on account of a belief that the Germans would not be able to fill them. As for exchange, the mark is already practically out of sight, and interest in it has been largely lost, except by those who continue to be holders of quantities of marks carried over from an earlier period when there was still a belief in the future of this kind of currency. Interest now centers largely around francs and securities that are stated in francs, and, despite the effort of the French governmental and financial authorities to maintain quotations through various artificial measures, there is a natural disposition to avoid commitments, owing to the fact that conditions evidently are adverse to the extension of larger credits to French interests during the continuance of the uncertain relationships growing out of the Ruhr occupation. Meantime, the investment market is naturally disposed to refrain for the moment from purchases of other classes of foreign obligations.

The Effect of Inflated Currency

The war and its aftermath have taught many valuable lessons but none more interesting, financial wise, than the one relating to national currencies. It has been the common belief of a fairly large number of misguided people in this and other countries that in order to enrich the masses all a government had to do was to issue its notes of hand in unlicited quantities, regardless of backing, and presto, change! the poor man would immediately become well off. This theory, put into practice by several of the old time countries, has, it is needless to say, proven a delusion and a snare. It is reported that in Russia the printing presses have turned out over 1,200,000,000,000,000 rubles (pre-war value 51½c) which in Moscow are now rated at 340,000 to an American cent and it takes approximately 1,700,000 of these to ride on a street car or to buy a loaf of black bread. Austria has issued over 4,000,000,000,000 kroner, valued before the war at over 20 cents each; now quoted at 700 to the cent. In Germany the Imperial bank has turned out more than 1,400,000,000,000 marks, formerly worth nearly 24 cents each but at the current rate of exchange (.0047) 213 can be had for one cent. In France the situation is of course different but even here the note circulation had on January 21 reached the enormous total of 36,780,408,000 francs, which today are quoted around 6 3-8 cents each against a pre-war value of say 19 cents. It is a foregone conclusion, therefore, that after the several bankrupt nations have been reorganized, never again will the sad experiment of unlimited currency be indulged in. It has proven to be anything but a boon to the working man in the benighted countries. One of these days the tons of worthless stuff now in circulation will make good bonfires for the urchins on election night.

Domestic Business Undisturbed

Domestic prices and business have continued practically undisturbed. Although wholesale prices, as recently announced, show a stable average index, indications point to higher values in many lines. Particularly is this true in textile industries, where a number of influences have combined to raise values, with the result of a well sustained level of quotations for this group of stocks. Steel prices and prices of building materials are moving toward a somewhat higher level, and there is reason to believe that costs of construction during the spring and summer will feel the effect, notwithstanding that in some parts of the country there is an apparent disposition to lessen activity, due to the partial satisfaction of the demand for building accommodation. The movements toward better values for copper have already been frequently noted, and have tended to hold the values of copper shares stable or at slightly rising figures, even when other issues were inclined to depression. The automobile trade has continued to book orders far ahead, and such declines in motor stocks as have occurred have been due to large new financing or some other extraneous influence.

Heavy Financing Absorbed

Unusually heavy financing is, in fact, being absorbed by the market, new issues since January 1 being exceptionally large. Among others have been the offering of the Anaconda-Chile combination and the new stock issue of Fisher Body, just announced, as well as numerous floatations of stocks and bonds of various industrial descriptions. Railroad issues continue to be comparatively limited in volume for well known reasons. The fact that the market can take so large a new supply of industrial issues of all descriptions is good testimony to its real absorptive power, and this, in turn, is witnessed in another way by the heavy over-subscriptions to government offerings, as well as to gilt-edged issues of a quasi-public variety. The community, undoubtedly, have very large saved funds which can be devoted to investment when there is an inducement, and the absence of the general public from the market in the same numbers in which it has been present in times past is due, not to lack of prosperity, but to uncertainty. Eventually, the market will take more cognizance of the underlying business conditions, and at that time further price advances may be expected. This probability is the factor which tends to prevent holders of stocks from parting with them, since they see that the power of the investment community generally to purchase and carry new issues is undiminished.

Maket Outlook

Although actual trading has been of an exceptionally quiet sort for a good many days past, sentiment has been improved somewhat by advices from Washington that there is little probability now of Congress being called in extra session. With the short time intervening before the present term expires, there is little chance of unfavorable legislation being put through; therefore, meddling with the Transportation act and taking up other subjects which are inimical to business interests will, apparently, be put off for almost another year, and on the theory that "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," holders of railroad securities are experiencing some relief. So far as the general share market is concerned, there is very little change. The demand for stocks continues light, but, on the other hand, it is daily becoming more and more apparent that those who hold stocks have no intention of parting with them. The Ruhr Valley situation is still regarded as critical, but our market refuses to pay much heed to it, the only effect of consequence being to temporarily hold back would-be buyers. This tends to show that the nerves of security holders here are quite steady, based on the excellent home conditions. So long as this feeling continues, there is little fear of serious liquidation taking place, which means that the market will eventually break away from its present moorings.

MOTHER! MOVE CHILD'S BOWELS

"California Fig Syrup" Is Child's Best Laxative

Even if cross, feverish, bilious, constipated or full of cold, children love the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." A teaspoonful never fails to clean the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the souring food and nasty bile out of the stomach and bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

She Mixed Sulphur With It to Restore Color, Gloss, Youthfulness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store, all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

Skin Ablaze with Eczema

Constant Itching Almost Unbearable!

We know there is one thing that stops eczema, and that is more red-blood-cells! S. S. S. builds them by the million! You can increase your red-blood cells to the point where it is practically impossible for eczema to exist. We know that as blood-cells increase in number, blood impurities vanish! We also know that night follows day. Both are facts! But have you, eczema sufferers, ever actually taken advantage of this wonderful fact? Thousands just like you have never thought about it! Skin eruptions, eczema with all its fiery, skin digging torture and its soul tearing, unreachable itching, pimples, blackheads and boils, they all pack up and go, when the tide of blood-cells begins to roll in! Blood-cells are the fighting-giants of nature! S. S. S. builds them by the million! It has been doing it since 1826! S. S. S. is one of the greatest blood-cell builders, blood-cleansers and body-builders known to us mortals! When you put these facts together,—then to continue to have eczema and skin eruptions looks more like a sin than a disease. Mrs. Arthur N. Smith, Pearl St., Newark, Ohio, writes: "My little girl had a very bad case of eczema. She began taking S. S. S. and is well now. I thank you very much. I tell my friends what a good medicine it is. I cannot talk too much about it, for I know it is O. K."

Here is your opportunity. S. S. S. contains only vegetable medicinal ingredients. Because S. S. S. does build red-blood-cells, it routs rheumatism, builds firm flesh, fills out hollow cheeks, beautifies the complexion, builds you up when you are run-down. S. S. S. is sold at all drug stores, in two sizes. The larger size bottle is the more economical.

S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again

GET A THIRD MORE SPUDS TO THE ACRE

94 Farmers, Working with College, Find Way To Stop Loss From "Hopperburn"

Persuaded to try for the first time the practice of spraying potato fields in summer with bordeaux mixture, 62 Ohio farmers now report harvesting a third more potatoes on every acre sprayed last summer. Their average net gain from this practice, after deducting all expenses, they figure at $30.28 to the acre.

Hopperburn, they state, can be controlled by thoro spraying with the bordeaux mixture. This spud disease, now recognized to result in some unknown manner from the presence of the leaf hopper, an insect, on the underside of the leaves, has within the past few years become perhaps the most serious potato pest with which Ohio farmers have to contend.

In 1921, T. H. Parks, extension entomologist of the Ohio State University and the county agents of a number of counties, got 32 farmers to try out bordeaux spraying. Reports now compiled close the second year of such work, which now has entered 13 counties.

The 62 farmer "demonstrators" of 1922 report yield increases averaging 31 percent, as compared to an average increase of 31.6 percent secured by the farmers who tried the method the year previous. Some sprayed as many as six times, some only two.

"Four sprayings gave the highest net gain," Prof. Parks states, "and the late summer applications were apparently the most important in hopperburn control."

Don't Spoil Your Child's Hair By Washing It

When you wash your child's hair be careful what you use. Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is all that is required. Simply moisten the hair with water, and rub the Mulsified in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29.—Annual convention of the Ohio Bookkeepers Association at Ohio State university, February 1-3, will be marked by discussion and determination of the question of affiliating with the American Honey Products League. A principal topic for discussion, also, will be that of a proposed foul brood law in Ohio.

The program calls for talks by Dr. S. B. Fracker, Wisconsin State entomologist; E. R. Root, Dr. E. F. Phillips of the bureau of entomology, Washington D. C., and George S. Demuph, editor of "Gleaners in Bee Culture."

DEFIANCE, Jan. 29 - Mrs Isabel Keighan, Defiance, has purchased a 24-apartment building in Chicago at a reported purchase price of $150,000, giving in exchange a highly improved farm between Defiance and Jewell. The apartment property, according to Chicago real estate interests, yields an annual income of $21,880.

BUCYRUS, Jan. 29. Local banks have received warning form the Cleveland Federal Reserve bank that Secret Service men have detected a counterfeit War Saving stamp, of the 1918 issue printed from copper plates in Germany and that they should carefully examine each stamp before passing them through for collection.

DEFIANCE, Jan. 29. - J. E. Whonsetler, Creston, new county farm agent succeeding Paul H. Teal, took up his new duties here. He is a graduate of the college of agriculture, Ohio State university. Mr. Teal will go to Moorehouse, Missouri, to engage in a land development project on his own account.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Jan 29.- Belmont County Farm Bureau, in its annual session here, adopted resolutions favoring a state income tax, submitting bond issues only at regular elections, for rural police and for a heavier tax on auto trucks. Because it would be opposing the stand of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, a plank favoring uniform taxation was eliminated from the resolutions after a fight.

ATHENS, Jan. 29.—Royal Arch Masons of Athens have secured a chapter of the Order of DeMolay, the only one south of Columbus, in Ohio. Sons of Masons will be eligible to this organization which is national in character. The lodge here will be known as Ohio university chapter.

ASHLAND, Jan. 29.—Owing to many complaints of unlicensed dogs, the county commissioners have employed an all-time dog catcher.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 29 — Plans have been made for the largest convention of its kind ever held in Ohio. It is expected that 5,000 Ohio retail merchants will attend the convention, to be held here next year.

Delegates to the proposed convention will include members of the Ohio Hardware, 'Ohio Retail Dry Goods,' Ohio Valley Retail Shoe Dealers, 'Ohio Furniture Dealers,' and the Ohio Retail Clothiers Associations.' In connection with the convention, it is planned that the various associations shall hold separate meetings. General retail problems as well as those affecting the individual associations are to be discussed.

LOGAN, Jan. 29.- Condemnation proceedings which had been started against the Bierhut heirs to secure more ground for the new court house, have been dropped. The land has been secured under option. The sum of $15,000 will be paid for the tract, which lies adjoining the present site.

YORKVILLE, Jan. 29. Dr E. L. Lowthian, local physician, fell down a flight of stairs while making a call here, fracturing his leg and otherwise injuring him

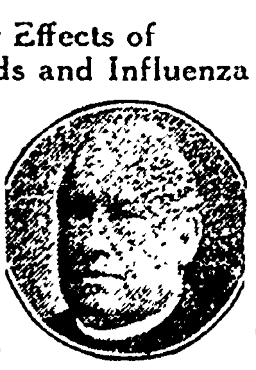
OBERLIN, Jan. 29. - Miss Anna Klingenhagen, dean of women at Oberlin college and former dean of women at Iowa State university, accepted a position as chairman of educational committee at Wellesley college

ELYRIA, Jan 29 Elyria high athletic association has instituted a new innovation and for the first time the school reporter of athletic games is awarded the letter. The first one thus honored is Clifford C. Hennings, who graduated a year ago.

MEDINA, Jan. 29. County Health Commissioner D. H. Biggs reports 13 notifiable diseases during the past month.

ATHENS, Jan 29 - George R Walker, who graduated from Ohio university 50 years afo and immediately started a book store on Main street, has sold out and retired. He was the oldest merchant in Athens in point of service and was known by thousands of former students all over the world.

The After Effects of Colds and Influenza



There is real danger in the after effects of colds and influenza because these attacks leave their victims with a cough or in a weakened condition, wide open to the attacks of other illness.

BOOST IN BUDGET OF HARBORS BILL WILL BE OPPOSED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 A showdown on the budget system of financing governmental operations—inaugurated by the present administration - is foreshadowed in connection with final action on the army appropriation bill, now pending before the senate. Embodied in this bill is the annual rivers and harbors appropriation and it is upon this so called "pork barrel" item that a spirited clash between the legislative and executive branches is expected to center.

President Harding has taken as a direct assault on the system the action of the house in increasing the rivers and harbors appropriation from $27,000,000 as recommended by the budget bureau to $56,000,000. This $29,000,000 increase, according to the white-house, "not only was unwarranted but was contrary to the spirit of the administration's economy policy."

It was made known in the plainest terms that the president resents the enormous increase over the submitted figures. Administration leaders are hopeful of favorable action by the senate. Already, certain groups in the upper house are understood to be preparing a vigorous fight for a reduction. Led by Senator King of Utah, and including many of the powerful administration senators, these men hope to bring the rivers and harbors figures back at least to a semblance of that submitted by the budget bureau.

SIX ENTER CONTEST FOR FIDDLER CROWN

Two, Less Than 60, Qualify as "Juniors;" Last Year's Champion Not Yet In

Entries in the State contest to select the senior and the junior champions of all the old-time country fiddlers in Ohio probably will be closed within the next few days. The limit set is six in each class, and four are already entered in the senior class, open only to genuine dyed-in-the wool country fiddlers over 60 years of age.

The contest is scheduled in University Hall of the Ohio State University, Columbus, at 7:30 on Friday evening, Feb. 2. It will be the closing event of Farmers' Week at the University, which starts at 9 o'clock Monday morning, Jan. 29.

As to the junior class provided for comparative youngsters of 60 or less, it is not filling up as rapidly as the other one. Two names now are entered, those of W. L. Thomas of Marengo, aged 52, and of Dan Wilson, Lancaster, aged 54. C. V. Hardin of Millersport, who last year won the State championship, has not yet made official entry, but it is expected that he will do so.

In the senior class are entered C. E. Wilson of Columbus, aged 65; Samuel Tinsley of Yellow Springs, aged 79; John Baltzell, Mt. Vernon, aged 62, and L. L. Nothstine, Rainsboro, aged 71.

The judges this year will be fiddlers 75 years of age or older. Each contestant will be allowed 10 minutes playing time, with time our for applause. H. C. Ramsower, state director of extension, will preside.

Making Men and Women But Losing Money

Few people realize the great difference between the annual cost of educating a student and the amount that he or she pays to the University. They have no conception of the investment that Ohio Wesleyan makes each year in her boys and girls, for which no charge can be made.

Ohio Wesleyan cannot charge students as much as their schooling costs, without closing the door of opportunity to those of moderate means, who see in Christian education a chance to render the highest service to the World.

This University no more seeks to make money than do our public schools; the public schools make up their income from taxes, while Ohio Wesleyan always has, and doubtless always will have, to depend upon income from endowment funds to make up her operating deficiencies.

Good Night Stories

DOTTY MEETS A DEAR LITTLE MOTHER.

OH, dear!" Dotty mused, as a dear little bird sailed over her head and lighted on a branch. "What a darling you are!"

The tiny birdling in question turned his head first to one side, then to the other, and glanced down at Dotty. Then, lifting his pretty throat, he began to sing. Dotty sat as quiet as a mouse until the song was over. Then she laughed.

"Oh, I'd give anything I own to know what that merry song is about," she cried. A tiny hand touched her arm, and a pair of laughing black eyes smiled into hers.

"Oh, Happy Giggles!" and Dotty almost upset the little elfin, she hugged him so hard. "Who is that dear little bird? I'd almost think he belonged to the Robin family by his red vest. Is he a robin?"

"Oh, Mr. Flower-eater!" Happy Giggles laughed, whistling to the tiny birdling. "Here's a little girl that thinks you're a robin. Come on down."

The tiny birdling sailed down to the grass beside Dotty and Happy Giggles.

"Dotty, this is Daddy Flower-eater. Daddy Flower-eater, this is Dotty," laughed the elfin. "She was just wishing she could understand your merry song. How's every one today?"

"Just fine!" twittered the little birdling. "Mrs. Flower-eater is in the best of health. You know she is sitting on her nest of eggs now. We expect our family to hatch most any time. She grows weary at times. So I try to lighten the work by singing to her. I don't mind singing my song, but maybe you'd let me fly home first and see that all is well. Come on with me! I'm sure you'd enjoy meeting Mama Flower-eater."

Dotty and Happy Giggles needed no second invitation, and away the three went.

He was a beautiful little bird with his vest of brilliant red.

Their home was in the topmost branch of the tallest tree in the wood.

"I guess that's why I haven't seen you before," Dotty said, after being introduced to Mama Flower-eater. "This is my first trip to Australia. Every day I find something new to tell Mother when I write. You must be very timid!"

"Well, rather," chirped the happy mother, slipping off her nest so Dotty could peek into the tiny opening at her lovely agate eggs. "That's why we build these little cotton balls for nests—so folks won't spy us."

"It does look like a cotton ball!" Dotty exclaimed. "I was so interested in seeing you and your eggs I didn't notice the nest. Where did you find such pretty stuff to build it out of?"

"Why, it's made entirely from the fluffy cotton substances found in the seed pods of the plants here. Some day I'll tell you how we found we could use them."

"That will be fine," Dotty laughed. "Now, may I hear your song, Daddy Flower-eater?"

Daddy Flower-eater was just about to begin when Dotty's aunt called, and Dotty hurried home. She was sorry to miss the song, but Happy Giggles promised to take her back to call on Mrs. Flower-eater the day the eggs were hatched, and Daddy Flower-eater promised to sing his merriest song for her.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

What Puzzled Madge About Claire Foster's Strange Attitude.

I SAW Dicky's eyes narrow ever so slightly as Claire Foster tauntingly asked him why he was delaying going after our dinner order while I made out the grocery list for the next day. And I knew that despite the strong attraction she apparently had for him, her crude exhibition of spoiled-beauty tyranny was annoying him exceedingly. But his voice was as insouciant as always when he answered:

"Because, angel-faced child, there are four flights of stairs leading to this apartment, and my lower limbs are very weary. After I have ordered the dinner I shall have plenty of time to attend to the grocery order, and thus save the extra journey."

She rose from the low chair into which she had flung her lithe length, walked up to him, and putting her hands upon his shoulders, swung him around facing the door. Then she snatched up his hat which he had deposited upon the top of the phonograph case and clapped it on his head.

"Forward, march!" she commanded. "It will take Madge a half-hour to make out that list—these perfect housekeepers have to have every item right, you know, and if you think I'm going to have my dinner delayed an extra half-hour, you have about nine and a half more deep thinks coming. My little Mary is wailing for eats, and she's going to get 'em. Where's your chivalry, man, thinking of your legs when a lady is hungry!"

Madge Is "Flabbergasted."

"I'm likely to forget you're a lady with much more of this sort of cave-woman stuff," he bantered lightly, but, without further words, he went out of the door. I wondered if there was not a soupcon of truth in his words.

As for myself, "flabbergasted"—one of my mother-in-law's favorite expressions—was the only word to express my reaction to Claire Foster's odd behavior. When I had first seen her, many months ago, in Dr. Pettit's company, she had attracted me by her fresh young beauty, her insouciance, and a certain breezy, warm-heartedness, spelling her western origin. But I had also been repelled by a tinge of hardness and boldness in her manner, which I had laid, however, to [illegible] modern youthful femininity.

The discovery of her photograph with its bizarre inscription in Dicky's room followed by the newspaper report of the escapade from which I just had rescued her, had given me a feeling for her which was as near hatred as an emotion could be. But her evident suffering, her apparently sincere remorse, her pathetic wish to do anything I wished when I reached the Barker house had banished that feeling altogether, and there had crept into my heart a strong sympathy for her, and the liking which one generally feels for the grateful recipient of one's kindness.

A Courteous Reply.

It had been but a few hours since on the train bearing us to the city she had murmured with every appearance of emotional sincerity

"Perhaps, sometime, I can prove my gratitude." And now, within a few minutes, she had been guilty of gross discourtesy toward me, and of an exhibition of petty feminine tyranny toward Dicky such as only a woman very sure of the fealty of a man would give.

What was behind this sudden change of demeanor? With a sudden flash of cynicism I remembered that until we found a refuge in the Bliss apartment there never had been a minute when we were free from observation by outsiders. Was that the reason for her good behavior?

Had she been playing a part in order to [illegible] my continued protection of her [illegible] assured, I told myself bitterly, that I was "easy," had she thrown off the mask?

Or—I hated to think her guilty of such deliberate meanness as my first thought—was she simply reverting without conscious thought to her natural self, out of which she had been frightened by the unpleasant experience which had befallen her at the Barker house?

My own course was plain, however. While she was our guest I could make no change in my treatment of her. To ignore such behavior as hers of the last few minutes would be hard, but I must do it.

I carefully avoided her eyes, however, as with elaborate carelessness I said sweetly:

"Come on, Claire. Dicky won't be back for half an hour. Let's look over the apartment, and plan where we're going to put things."

THE HOME KITCHEN

Why the Popular Plate Dinner Saves Time and Labor

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON

The Authority on Home Cooking

THE labor saved by serving plate dinners in a good-sized family is quite worthy of consideration. In the first place, food is served in this way hot right from the utensils in which it was cooked, and there is no extra dishwashing. Again, the food on the plates can be so attractively arranged that it particularly looks appetizing.

In buying special plates, the blue ware will be found decorative. Bread and butter plates can be purchased to match. As these are the only two plates on the table at the same time, they will not conflict with other china that may be used for a salad course and the dessert, if one is served.

In moulding meat jellies, bear the plate in mind, and mould them in small moulds. After-dinner coffee cups may be used as moulds in an emergency. In this way they take little room on the plate, and form part of the garnishing. Care must be taken also to select the sort of vegetables that go with the meat chosen. Liquid sauces or dressings should be avoided in this service.

If a soup or fish precedes the plate, the table is cleared and the plate holds the next course without side-dishes of any sort.

In serving a roast-leg-of-lamb plate, the slices should be neatly cut, and the potatoes roasted with the meat should be served with it. Also, a portion of panned spinach, two corn fritters, a mould of currant or mint jelly, and a tiny stuffed and baked tomato or red pepper may be served. This makes a decorative and excellent plate dinner. Rolls and butter should be served with this plate.

A fried-chicken plate should contain plenty of the delicately-browned chicken, two or more pieces of Maryland sweet potatoes, creamed asparagus tips, a rice croquette and a mould of currant jelly. Usually, the big bones of the chicken are deftly cut out before serving.

A baked-ham plate may contain generous slices of the ham, mashed sweet potatoes cooked with marshmallows, a mould of apple jelly, a stuffed baked tomato and an apple fritter. A spray of fresh watercress adds a touch of green to the plate.

A baked fresh-ham plate is excellent if a chestnut sauce is used over the ham. Broiled sweet potatoes, fried apple slices, rice croquettes and pepper jam mould are served with it. Here again the cress adds a pretty touch to the garnishing.

For the roast-beef plate, a slice of Yorkshire pudding, potatoes roasted with the meat, mashed turnips and boiled onions, with a little tomato jelly added, make a pleasing and good combination.

The vegetable plate is one that interests those who do not care for meat. A generous slice of vegetable loaf, an apple fritter, a portion of macaroni and cheese and peas make a hearty dinner, and if liked, a breaded fried pepper may be added.

The fish plate is also attractive with boiled or baked fish and sauce, boiled potatoes, a clam fritter, escaloped shrimps and fried cucumbers with tartar sauce. There are, of course, many other combinations, but these examples give an idea of fish-plate possibilities.

A hamburg-steak plate is popular, and besides the steak with its fried onion coating or sauce, there may be included escaloped potatoes, stewed corn, a stuffed, baked pepper and a bit of fresh cress.

A number of the plates have depressions intended for each article served. But these plates are not a necessity, as plain, large-sized plates may be used with perfect propriety. Plain plates may be used at other times for special service plates or for cake or cold-meat plates, while it is impossible to use the other plates in this way.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT The Clams

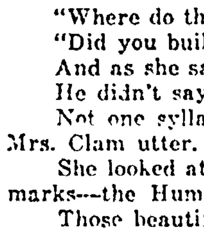
Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.



Winifred Black

THERE they were, at the breakfast table in the big hotel on Sunday morning.

The Human Being and Mr. and Mrs. Clam.

Mr. and Mrs. Clam had evidently invited the Human Being to breakfast with them—I could see him wondering why—through the very back of his head.

And they had ordered breakfast—rather a substantial affair with grapefruit and omelette with fine herbs and two or three slices of bacon well-grilled, and a chop or so and some French-fried potatoes and rolls and popovers and things and pots of hot coffee all around.

The table set in the window in the choicest position in the room—Oh, everything was quite comfy and the best that money could buy!

I rather fancy Mr. and Mrs. Clam always see to that.

But, dear me, there wasn't a thing at that breakfast—but food and drink and service—not a smile, not a laugh, not one look of friendly understanding.

Mr. Clam looked at the headlines of the morning paper.

Mrs. Clam glanced at the funnies and the Human Being waited for them to get through with the papers and tried very hard to make himself agreeable.

"Fine view of the lake from here, isn't there?" he said cheerfully.

Mrs. Clam looked out of the window sullenly—then she raised her eyebrows.

"Ye-es," she said coldly and a little as if somebody ought to speak to the Human Being and tell him what bad form it was to be so cheerful.

When Their Eyes Lighted

"Lovely weather for winter—isn't it?" said the Human Being, speaking to Mr. Clam.

"Ugh!" grunted Mr. Clam, with a surly nod.

He tried everything—the poor Human Being—the weather, the theatres, the news in the morning paper, the new length of the skirts, what would be the best kind of furs for a man to give his wife for her birthday—nothing interested the Clams.

Finally the Human Being gave a deep sigh—then he brightened up.

"Well," he said, "one week from today I'll be home again."

"Ugh!" grunted Mr. Clam. "So will we."

The Human Being took some snapshots out of his pocket.

"Ever see these of the folks?" he asked. "Here's a nice view of the river and the orchard. Gee, it makes me homesick just to look at it!"

Mrs. Clam's eyes lit with the cold flurry of eager curiosity. She took the little snapshots as fast as she could get them. She didn't look at the picture of the orchard or the one of the river or one of the apple tree in bloom. What she wanted was facts—information.

What kind of clothes did the Human Being's wife wear? Was the house she lived in, smart or ordinary? How did she dress her children?

"Is this your wife?" Why, there was even animation in her flat, unpleasant voice.

"Are these your children?"

"How old are they?"

"Where do they go to school?"

"Did you build this house yourself?"

And as she saw each picture she passed it quickly to her husband.

He didn't say a word—he just grunted.

Not one syllable of approbation or admiration or kindly interest did Mrs. Clam utter.

She looked at those precious snapshots as if they were labels or price marks—the Human Being fairly squirmed.

Those beautiful boys of his, that love wife, the home he is so proud of and the view he cherishes in his heart and dreams of in his homesick hours. What a fool he was to show them to Mr. and Mrs. Clam!

What a Lot They Miss!

What did they care about things like that? What were his hopes, his pride, his fears, his ambitions, his heart's delight and soul's comfort to the Clams?

What were they going to get out of it?

If ever I saw a man glow with relief and delight, that man was the Human Being when the waiter came with a telephone call for him.

"I do hope a real Human Being is calling him up to ask him to dinner," I thought. And when he came back he said that it was Tom Somebody wanted him to run out and spend Sunday with him and the children and the wife.

"Awfully sorry, don't you know, so glad to have seen you again, wish you pleasant trip, good-by."

His very back sang glory hallelujah on getting away from the Clams!

And I don't blame him—it gave me the blues even to sit at the next table to him.

I haven't a doubt that Mrs. Clam wonders why she isn't popular, and Mr. Clam prides himself on the fact that the average person doesn't like him.

Poor things, what a lot they do miss—and never know it!

Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE.

I am a girl in my teens, and am considered good-looking, but somehow I don't seem to have many young men friends. There is a young man whom I see quite frequently, and I admire him very much. I have spoken to him several times although I have never had an opportunity to get an introduction to him. As I have never been in his company I haven't had a chance. Would you please tell me how I could get an introduction to him so that we may become friends?

ANXIOUS.

ANXIOUS. You are doing a very undignified thing, my dear, in speaking to a man to whom you have not been introduced. Wait until you find a mutual friend who can present the young man properly before you cheapen yourself in his eyes again.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE.

We are two girls in our teens. We want your advice as to how to win the love of the young men we are going with.

They say they love us, but they tell us things about other girls that we don't like. How can we make them leave other girls alone?

We have never seen them with any girls, but we are very jealous. They take us to shows and parties, and have two dates a week. They have asked us to marry them, and they say they love us.

SALLIE and CHARLOTTE.

SALLIE and CHARLOTTE: The young men must love you or they would not have asked you to marry them.

If you are engaged, ask them not to tease you about other girls. But if you are not you have no right to be annoyed by their remarks, my dears.

Why are you jealous? It will only make you unhappy and less attractive in their eyes.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens. I am very much in love with a young man, and he says he loves me. But he has been going with another girl. Will you please advise me what to do?

ANXIOUS.

ANXIOUS: You [illegible] not engaged to the young man, and have no right to object to his going with other girls.

Do nothing except make yourself so attractive that he will prefer you to the others.

Ways to Bring Beauty Back to Lustreless Hair

By LUCREZIA BORI

The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

LATELY I have heard many women complaining: "This cold weather works havoc with my hair. I simply can't make it look well!"

I know exactly what they mean, for the state of your hair can do much to make or mar your beauty, and there's nothing more quickly affected by changes in the weather than your hair. It's very, very sensitive to heat and cold and sunshine and fresh air.

Your best consolation, however, is that just as it's affected easily by changes in the weather, so does it respond quickly to treatment.

In any beauty culture there is a wonderful satisfaction in seeing quick results. I want you to be enthusiastic in caring for your hair, knowing that its sensitiveness to treatment will quickly result in an improvement in your looks.

Have you noticed that often when the weather grows suddenly colder your hair seems to lose its sheen and grow flat and unattractive? It lies close to your head in a dead, lifeless way, and no amount of combing or brushing or worrying over it seems to help it one whit.

Now, the thing to do in a case like this is to treat your hair vigorously, knowing all the while that it will brighten up and look better.

A good hair tonic can do wonders. Here is one which you can have your druggist mix for you:

Oil of almonds	6 ounces
Oil of rosemary........	2 drams
Oil of mace............	60 drops

Brush your hair out straight, remove all the tangles with your comb, and proceed like this: Carefully part your hair all over, separating it so that you can easily get at your scalp in applying the tonic.

Now, take a small bit of absorbent cotton, dip it in the lotion, and rub it into your scalp. Continue to part your hair and apply the hair tonic until it has been thoroughly applied to your scalp. The best way to insure this is to part your hair through the centre, then in lines running off to either side from this central part.

When you have applied the tonic, spend a few minutes briskly rubbing your finger-tips. You don't want to have your hair so saturated with the lotion that it will be wet. You only have a little of it on the cotton, and it is intended to be rubbed well into your scalp, and not over your hair. However, if your hair needs a little drying you can rub it with a soft towel.

Now, here is a trick of a clever hairdresser I know. It's very effective for cleaning your hair, and you will be glad to know about it:

Comb your hair thoroughly after applying the tonic. Take a small piece of absorbent cotton and pull it out so it is thin and long enough to fit over half the teeth of your comb. Slip it through the teeth and up to the base of the comb. This cleanses your hair while you comb it, and if your hair needs cleansing you'll be surprised at the dust that comes off on the cotton.

YOUR HEALTH

How Much Do You Eat at an Average Hearty Meal?

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Commissioner of Health, New York City

U. S. Senator-Elect from New York State

DR. COPELAND

HOW much do you eat at each meal? How much do you add to your weight? I venture to say you have no idea how much you consume in food and drink.

Some friends of mine made a test last Thanksgiving day. There were fourteen at the dinner, and everybody "weighed in" before beginning the meal. At the end of the substantial portions of the dinner and before the dessert was eaten there was another weighing.

Lo and behold! The fourteen persons had gained a total of forty-eight pounds! This was an average of three and three-sevenths pounds. The gains varied from one and one-half to six pounds per person. Six of the guests added less than the average gain, while eight took in more than the average amount.

This seems incredible, but the fact is well substantiated. To me it is a pound for every pint—"A pint's a pound the world around." Many persons drink too much at meals. It is probable that the persons at the dinner who gained most drank more than those who gained less.

Drinking a lot at meals means two things. It means the addition of an unnecessary amount of fluid. What is more significant, the fluid washes down more food than could possibly be swallowed otherwise. I doubt if it would be possible to eat two or three pounds of food without taking an equal weight in water.

Everybody has a horror of getting fat, yet obesity is the bane of modern life. There are just two causes for excessive weight—over-eating and under-exercise. If you would be thin you must eat less or exercise more, or both.

Of course, there are certain days—the great national days and family birthdays—when there is special dispensation so far as food is concerned. Most persons plan on eating more than on any other day, and don't care if they suffer a little as a result. It is probable that no permanent harm will follow an occasional "spree" of this sort. Unless there should be a sudden attack of acute indigestion with serious results, no ill effects are likely to be felt after three or four days.

We may be excused then, if we eat three or four pounds of food on a holiday, but we must not do this every day. Gout, Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries, apoplexy, bad complexion—these are a few of the penalties imposed on heavy eaters. Most hearty eaters grow fat. As their fatness increases much of the heart muscle is replaced with fat, and the other vital organs are interfered with in their functions by impactions of fat.

Everybody should know about food values. At least you should know enough about food to eat sensibly.

Knowledge is power, it is said. Certainly in no other field is knowledge more productive and important than in this field.

Answers to Health Questions

A READER. Q—I am a woman 37 years old, and am troubled with chronic nephritis, high blood-pressure and dropped stomach. Is my condition serious, and what would you advise me to do?

A—Your condition is serious enough to require careful treatment until it improves. Remain under the care of your physician, and follow the advice he gives you.

G. G. B. Q—Will you please tell me what would cause the white part of my eyes to be very yellow at times?

A—This may be due to catarrh or a stone in the gall-bladder, or it may be due to some disturbance of the ducts. You should have your physician examine you and try to find out what is causing the trouble, and then have proper treatment. For further particulars on the treatment of gall-bladder trouble, restate your question and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

M. K. Q—I am a young man 21 years of age, and my work is such that I am out of doors the greater part of the day. Will you advise me whether cod-liver oil is a good tonic, and whether it will help to prevent taking cold?

A—Cod-liver oil is a fine general tonic and suitable for your purposes. Also keep your general health built up by eating good, nourishing food, practising deep breathing, exercising regularly, and getting regular hours of sleep in a well-ventilated room.

* * *

MRS. E. M. F. Q—Will you please tell me what causes the growth of superfluous hair?

A—Heredity, age and cutaneous irritation such as sunburn may cause the growth of superfluous hair.

MISS H. Q—Will you please tell me what is being done for the decrease of infant mortality and the betterment of mothers?

A—Pure-milk supply, assured protection of the food supply by inspection, instructions to mothers, and care of infants by the department of health doctors and nurses, the establishment of free health centres, milk stations and baby clinics are among the many activities in this line in all wide-awake cities.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble.

TUESDAY, JAN. 30.

An unusually eventful day may be read from this day's planetary forecast. With Uranus and Jupiter both in trine aspect with the lunar orb there is prospect of an important change, which may be the turning point to a career of splendid achievement and financial return. Removal or travel is involved and bound to bring benefit, provided that a tendency to be impetuous and hasty be overcome. The mind may be under high stimulus and the abilities quickened, but they should not be allowed to be tumultuous, as this may nullify excellent prospects.

Those whose birthday it is have the forecast of an active and important year, with the outcome one of prosperity and fulfilled ambitions, if they do not permit impulsive and discordant actions to defeat their excellent prospects. Probable travel is foreseen. A child born on this day will be energetic, talented and ambitious and will be generally successful in its undertakings.

A Bronze and Coral Girdle Adds the Note of Contrast to This Slim Black Afternoon Frock.

BLACK is always smart, and this season it is smartest when it is combined with some contrasting note to give it added life.

The slim black satin afternoon gown shown here is very simply made. Its long, finely-pleated panels give variety and its exquisite design at the girdle furnishes the only trimming needed.

The background of the girdle is bronze, and over this bronze threads and coral beads trace their interesting design. The turban is of black velvet with coral velvet flowers about its brim.

KIDNEY TROUBLE CAUSES LAMENESS

"A lameness followed me for some time, and I felt that it was caused from kidney trouble. One bottle of Foley Kidney Pills had the desired effect," writes H. B. Arbuckle, South Barre, Vermont. Backache, rheumatism, dull headache, too frequent or burning urination are symptoms of Kidney and Bladder trouble. Disordered kidneys require prompt treatment. Neglect causes serious complications. Foley Kidney Pills give quick relief.

ON THE THRESHOLD OF Y. W. C. A.

Man Like, Karl Vogel Whose Record of the A. C. James World Tour to Visit Missions and Associations Is Just Out, Fails to Go Inside

A new book just out records the recent world tour of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James on their yacht "Aloha." "One of the objects of our world tour was to visit missions and Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. centers," said Mrs. James recently when speaking of the cruise. "All of them have been close to our hearts for years. It was an inspiration to see the work at first hand."

In "Aloha Around the World" Karl Vogel who accompanied the party makes a fascinating record of the tour, with its glimpses of unfrequented corners of the world. Mrs. James' unfailing visits to the Young Women's Christian Associations upon making ports are dutifully recorded by him. From Yokohoma and Calcutta, Mrs. James was an indefatigable visitor to the Association. At Colombo, Foochow, Singapore, Madras, Shanghai, Peking and Tokio the Association centers also claimed her warm interest.

But manlike, Mr. Vogel turned his own steps elsewhere, pouring over dusty old documents and into old temples centuries old, leaving nothing but the initials "Y. W. C. A." in the picture.

As a picture of the old world background against which the American work operates in many lands, the book however is invaluable. To local Associations supporting secretaries in these countries the book will have particular interest.

Many of the ports where the Aloha dropped anchor will be visited by the 1924 world tour conducted by the National Board. Bookings are already being made. "Aloha Around the World" is published by G. P. Putnam Sons.

SEED AFFECTS OATS YIELDS

Clean, heavy oats seeded at the rate of 10 pecks per acre on disked land give the highest yields at the Experiment Station farm at Wooster.

A test covering a period of 13 years has proved that nothing is gained by screening out the small heavy grains from seed oats. In fact the unscreened oats has yielded slightly more than the large seed.

Altho separation of the seed into large and small grains is unnecessary, the light weight grains whether large or small should be blown out and all weed seeds removed by the screens.

On stubble land free from weeds disking has given larger yields than plowing. However, it is said, weeds are likely to be more troublesome on the disked land in seasons of plenty of rain.

Ten pecks of seed per acre has given larger net yields than thinner seeding in the Station tests.

CRUDE OIL PROVES GOOD LICE KILLER

Crude oil is found to be one of the best lice killers at this time of year when used on hogs and even on cattle intests at the Ohio Experiment Station.

In commenting on these results, animal husbandry men say that crude oil does not evaporate like water and therefore does not chill an animal in cold weather as remedies do that are in solution or that have water as a carrier.

Pneumonia may result when pigs are subjected to the water solution baths. In addition to being safe in winter, crude oil stays on the body a long time thus making it very effective in destroying all of the lice.

Crude oil has been used with satisfactory results on the beef cattle herd at the Experiment Station as well as on swine.

ST. VALENTINE'S LONG KNOWN AS DAY OF HEARTS

"For this was on seynt Valentines day, Whan every bird cometh ther to chose his mate."—Chaucer.

The old notion was that birds began to choose their mates in February. Then Marcus Aurelius Flavius Claudius had a bishop of the church put to death on 14 February, seventeen hundred and fifty-two years ago. The bishop became a martyr and a saint and because his name was Valentinus-February 14 became his day, St. Valentine's day.

It is easy to find some satirical significance in the superposition on the calendar of these days, the bishop's and the bird's. It takes something of the courage of a Christian martyr to publicly choose a mate. They used to draw lots on St. Valentine's eve, the young men and the young women gathered together, making merry. And it is safe to suppose that when a young man was not pleased with his lot, he made sarcastic remarks, until it occurred to him to transfer his bitterness into drawings which exaggerated the crossed eyes or the straight hair or the ugly expression of the unloved one. Having vented his own wrath, he could then show it to her, thus spoiling the evening for both of them, but possibly satisfying the "grouch" that at some seasons afflict even lovers.

It's a fortunate thing that the people who start customs which are to last until the planet cools, have no notion of what they are starting. Fancy poor old Valentine's dismay as he ascended to the stake, if he had realized that his name would be taken in vain by every young man making amorous advances to a young woman along in the early spring—"I am your valentine," not knowing that what he was really saying was, "I am your martyr." And those Chaucerian boys and girls, meeting to choose Valentines—fancy the irritated one with a talent for drawing suddenly seeing himself at the head of a long line of ungallant youths, hi seffort at satire the forerunner of all the ugly comics that ever made a maiden blush or a matron lose her temper.

But it might have made the sweet-souled youth a bit smug when he enclosed his undying affection in gilt and lace and wrapped it in a sweet-scented fern, to look down the years ahead of him at the truck loads, the car loads, the factories built to produce just such lace and gilt and silver concrete tokens of an instinct no less beautiful because it frequently is evanescent.

as they appear, in order that when they begin preparations of their returns they may have before them a comprehensive summary of the requirements of the revenue act.

The tax is imposed upon net income, which is gross income less certain specified deductions for business expenses, losses, bad debts, etc., to be fully explained later. Single persons may substract from net income, before calculating the normal tax, an exemption of $1,000. The exemptions for married persons and heads of families are $2,500 on incomes of $5,000 or less and $2,000 on incomes in excess of $5,000.

Taxpayers are allowed, also, an additional credit of $400 for each person dependent upon them for chief support, if such person is under 18 years of age or incapable of self support because mentally or physically defective.

Requirement to file an income tax return rests upon every single person whose net income for 1922 was $1,000 or more or whose gross income was $5,000 or more and upon every married person whose net income was $2,000 or more or whose gross income was $5,000 or more, regardless of whether or not the income is taxable. For example a man and wife with two children 12 and 14 years old had a net income for 1922 of $2,700. Their exemptions and credits amount to $3,300. A single man whose net income was $1,800 supports in his home an aged mother. His exemption is $2,500 as the head of a family, plus a $400 credit for a dependent. In both cases returns must be filed, though the incomes are not taxible.

sion of the league budget and routine matters, but that other subjects undoubtedly will be introduced.

Earl Balfour, in his statements on Mosul, will contend that Britain's interest in the Mosul oil fields are based on two considerations, first that Mosul is a part of Mesopotamia (for which England was granted a mandate) and not part of the Turkish state, as Angora claims.

Second, that the British have commercial concessions in Mosul which cannot be disregarded without a breach of international law and usage.

It is certain, that the league will take no action in the Near East unless Angora refuses to sign the Lausanne treaty and threatens actual war.

French opposition to interference in the Ruhr by the league made it uncertain if Dr. Branting of Denmark would get a chance to introduce his resolution demanding arbitration.

LONDON, Jan. 29. — Great Britain has taken precautions to meet any emergency in the Near East it was announced at the foreign office today.

Foreign officials said Turkey would not be given a time limit when the Near East peace treaty is presented to them for signing, at Lausanne this week. They are hopeful that Angora eventually will accept.

terms. Those who counsel acceptance point out Britain san save money by adopting the American conditions with their 3 percent interest instead of continuing to pay 5 percent, the temporary rate.

Certain members of the government believe that acceptance will cement the friendly feelings between the two nations and perhaps assist Britain in pursuading the United States to insist on settling the European problems.

The Evening Standard supports Chancellor Baldwin, who wants the terms accepted. This paper believes that the terms are the best obtainable. It holds that American press criticism, is due to supersensitiveness.

The paper added: "But while the terms are best from a commercial standpoint, they are scarcely congruous with American propaganda for remitting allied claims upon Germany. Many Britons are unable to banish the reflection that, but for the deference paid to American idealism in the peace conference, the question of our debt to the United States today would be of little importance."

The Tory paper Morning Post, urged payment saying: "It is neither just nor reasonable to regard war debts as ordinary commercial obligations, but we are too proud to default."

The Westminster Gazette recommended acceptance to prove that Britain is not a thriftless nation.

Ambassador Harvey appeared to be in the best of health upon his arrival. He said he had a good voyage and felt fit to take up his duties where he left off last month.

OTHER M. P. CHURCHES TO SEND DELEGATIONS TO HEAR EVANGELIST

Services at the Methodist Protestant church are continuing to draw good-sized audiences under the leadership of Pastor-Evangelist B. F. McKinnon. Concerning them the pastor, the Rev. L. M. McVey, remarked today: "It seems to me that the church and the community are manifesting a genuine interest in the work, such as I have not seen since I have been a resident of Coshocton. This affords me great encouragement. I am hoping that our work will be built up, and that it will spread to all the other churches of our city, and that all will have occasion to rejoice.

"Several of the surrounding Methodist Protestant churches are planning to send delegations to the services. Tuesday night has been designated as Sunday school night, and a delegation is expected from Prairie chapel and Mt. Zion. Wednesday evening a delegation is planning to be present from the Franklin M. P. and the Conesville M. E. churches."

The evangelist gave two splendid sermons Sunday. The morning subject was "It is Finished," and the evening was "Set Thine House in Order." The auditorium was filled and it was necessary to seat a few in the Sunday school room. Services tonight will be held at 7:30 p. m.

State Bulletin Gives Poultry House Plans

A new poultry house has been designed by D. C. Kennard, associate in charge of poultry, Ohio Experiment Station, with special reference to the three vital factors necessary to the comfort and welfare of the birds in all seasons. These factors are ventilation, light and dryness.

The windows are so arranged as to afford abundance of light in all parts of the house. Windows in the north side of the house under the droppings board is a valuable feautre of this house.

The ventilators and windows are readily adjusted to permit the free movement of air and insure the comfort of the flock during the hottest or coldest days of the year.

Plans of this new poultry house and of equipment such as the Station drymash feeder, water-stand, wall nests, etc., are given in the November-December Monthly Bulletin, which is being mailed to all persons whose names are on the Station mailing list. Others may receive this number by addressing the Experiment Station, Wooster, Ohio.

Dr Grant's Reply

THE probability of a heresy trial in the Episcopal Church was sensibly diminished by the response of the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant to the letter of Bishop Manning. Dr. Grant would perhaps not mind facing a heresy inquiry based upon the declarations of belief made in his latest statement, but Bishop Manning and his advisers would undoubtedly be loath to press the issue upon such terms. For while the rector of the Church of the Ascension has neither resigned nor recanted, he has so phrased his beliefs as to make them less offensive to those differing from him in creed.

In substance, Dr. Grant showed that the dissent he offered to a literal interpretation of the Apostles' Creed was characteristic of the present views of a respectable element in the Anglican church. In his scholarly defense the clergyman was able to align on his side some of the best known priests and scholars in the English church. If Dean Inge is not not too outspoken to serve the Episcopal Church in London, perhaps the Episcopal Church in New York could use Dr. Grant? So ran the implication of his argument.

Bishop manning had suggested in his homily on loyalty that the proper boundary of liberty must some time be defined. Dr. Grant concurred: "The limit is truth, and he who is disloyal to truth has no place in the ministry of the church." With argumentative skill and evidence of theological learning he presented the case for a symbolic rather than a literal acceptance of the creed. He rejected miracles as being irrelevant to the spirit of Christ. He cited the familiar reference to the descent into hell, an ecclesiastical affirmation which obviously reflects the geology taught in the provinces during the reign of Augustus Caesar rather than that of the present, and the resurrection of physical body, as portions of the creed which had to be taken symbolically if at all.

This is adroit dialectic. The more conservative theologians hardly dare teach that the physical bodies of those who die will appear again in the same form. Yet the resurrection of the dead is a part of the Apostles' Creed. If all men interpret a part of the creed symbolically, the question again arises where is the line to be drawn? Dr. Grant points to truth, a knowledge of what is, as the proper limit.

On the primary issue of the divinity of Jesus Dr. Grant yielded everything and nothing. He rejects the Platonist and the Aristotelian explanations of relationship between Jesus and God, and still to him "Jesus is the portrait of the invisible God, the perfect revelation of my Heavenly Father." Finally Dr. Grant accepted as a statement of his own position the writing of Dr. Swete, the late regius professor of divinity in Cambridge University, who said that "the disciples of the Word dare not turn away from the teachings of God in nature or in history because they may be thot to involve a reconstruction of some of our cherished beliefs."

Plainly it will be difficult to exorcise opinions which are supported by the learned men of the church. A heresy trial under such conditions could hardly profit the church, altho the controversy might delight the multitude.

The Fool Reaps Folly's Reward

WHY men in communities like this which abound with newspapers and other means of information continue to tamper with sure death in the form of illicit beverages is beyond comprehension. Why any man, no matter how ignorant or depraved, unless he have suicidal intent, will drink freely of liquor purchased from bootleggers is equally a mystery.

Rarely can one pick up an issue of any daily paper without seeing one or more accounts of deaths due to patronage of these potential murderers. So frequent have been these warnings of the press for years past that even the illiterate by this time should possess ample warning of the sure fate which awaits him who imbibes too often of these proscribed beverages.

This community has been singularly free from these horrible deaths, but now and then a victim is listed. Our people are temperate and our law enforcement officials, both county and municipal, have been efficient and circumspect in guarding against sales of these poisonous and unspeakable drinks. But the most watchful officials in the world cannot prevent fools now and then reaping the penalty for their folly.

In time this unfortunate condition all over the country will change for the better. We are just now at a stage of prohibition law enforcement which apparently every community must go thru. There are men so addicted to alcoholic drinks that they will chance any concoction offered to them. So long as there is life in them they will tempt fate whenever the deadly potion is offered.

This period will probably extend over a few more years, but so sure as experience counts there will come a turning. Gradually the accounts of these criminal deaths will grow less in the papers. The inveterate topers, one by one, will meet their inevitable fate. There are men walking the streets of Coshocton today who will persevere in their senseless course until the bottle is tipped which will spell their horrible doom.

But the oncoming generation will be mercifully spared. No man who lives a normal life in boyhood and arrives at maturity without having crossed the threshold of a saloon will form the drink habit via the bootlegger route. And such a generation is coming on. There are even now in Coshocton, and all over this broad land of ours, boys approaching 21 who know nothing of the liquor traffic as it existed in this country up to five years ago. They will never know the insatiable craving for whisky that still drives thousands of men to make illicit purchases of the rotten concoctions now passing as "whisky."

Then and not until then, will prohibition come into its own. In the old saloon days there were scores of men who died from slow alcoholic poisoning where there is one quick victim of the bootlegger today. But the old alcoholic victim was the usual. The man who takes a drink of bootleg liquor, curls up and dies is the unusual. Hence the difference in the attitude of the daily press. Taking community and family into consideration, perhaps the victim of the bootlegger finds the more merciful fate.

New York Day-by-Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Waked betimes and came a fine letter from Donn Byrne, the pamphleteer, who is in Ireland and then to see F. Ziegfeld, who is ill. Breakfasted at a new cafe and the most adroit waiter who ever served me but learned he was the proprietor, his waiters having gone on strike.

Walked through the town, stopping in to see Rube Goldberg, the limner, and F. Knowles there and we talked of days when we all laboured on the Evening Mail but with little longing for them.

In the afternoon to Berton Braley's home and a gay crowd too, the poet giving a party as a farewell for the voyage he is taking to Japan and China.

By tram northward but so crowded I left it to go afoot and to see Jack Lait and he told me of the Iroquois fire in Chicago and how he worked 72 hours in the office and left it to attend a double funeral. Home and read in the Coue books but soon fell asleep. So to bed.

New York's side streets are overrun these cold nights with a new sort of grafter. He is the "fur bargain" salesman and so great are the rewards that the fakers have an organization and a head office.

The salesman assumes the disguise of a truckman and stands in a hallway. He picks the prosperous looking—the young man who might have a sweetheart.

"Howdja like a fine fur piece for your lady friend?" is his greeting. In his truckman's disguise he has created an idea that perhaps a fur was left in his wagon. The buyer naturally expects a bargain.

He is shown a very showy fur piece. In the dim light it looks as if it was very, very costly. When he asks the price, the salesman feigns ignorance and leaves it to the buyer's judgment.

The usual offer ranges from $10 to $15 and the salesman accepts it—the buyer going on his way with the idea he has the rarest sort of bargain. The truth is that the fur is not worth more than $2.

The police are unable to stop the game for if a buyer should call an officer the salesman has a bill of sale ready to show that the merchandise was bought and paid for in a strictly legal way.

It has been some time since I have seen "Old Horse and Wagon" the only Chinese beggar in New York. He is slowly becoming blind and now has his "pitch" near a Broadway chop suey caravansary. For a coin he will sing any of the popular ditties in Pidgin English. He is a pathetic old fellow and the police never molest him.

Heaven bless 'em! On aristocratic Park Avenue at dusk I saw two old fellows with white beards having a snow-ball battle. When I came around the corner suddenly stopped—and looked very sheepish. But I peeked around the corner at the next block and they were at it again.

I think most of us are cluttered up with entirely too many inhibitions. The president of a fair sized railroad in New York tells me that every spring he has a keen longing to spin a top. "But," he says, "if my directors were to hear I was spinning tops, they'd tap their heads and I'd probably be carted off to a sanitarium for a rest."

A low-brow has no business writing about opera. I did recently and scored two blunders. So my sympathy is with the New York dramatic critic who covered a prize fight and spoke of a pugilist's "cauliflowered jaw."

SPORTSMEN WATCH PROGRESS OF THE ANGLER'S LICENSE

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29—Sportsmen throughout Ohio are anxiously watching the progress of the angler's license bill, now before the legislature, which provides that no person over the age of 19 shall fish in Ohio waters, without first having procured a license costing fifty cents, the money derived from the license fees to be used in building hatcheries, clearing up polluted streams and making better fishing in all parts of the state.

This is not a tax for the privilege of going fishing, it is a system whereby each fisherman may contribute a small sum to help restock Ohio streams and lakes, without burden to the taxpayers.

There are at least 400,000 fishermen who are taking fish from Ohio waters year to year, and more hatcheries must be built, and the work of restocking extended in order to prevent Ohio waters from being depleted, according to A. C. Baxter, chief of the division of fish and game. The fishing license means better fishing for everyone, and the clearing up of hundreds of miles of polluted streams.

To date, the work of restocking and building of hatcheries has been paid by the hunters and trappers thru their license money, and it is no more than right that the fisherman pay his share "Any fisherman who believes unselfishly in conservation should be willing to contribute fifty cents per year, to help replace the fish he takes from the waters, and to insure good fishing for little folks now growing up, and for future generations," Baxter says.

This bill has been endorsed not only by the League of Ohio Sportsmen, representing 150,000 sportsmen of Ohio, but also by the State Grange and Farm Bureau, as a necessary constructive measure.

WALT MASON

OUT OF JAIL

I was sorry when my niece killed a lady with a rock; sorry when the fresh police put her under key and lock; but a jury of her peers, moved to pity by her tears, let her down with seven years, and she smiled and left the dock. Clara—that's my niece's name—was in luck, we must agree, and she should have played the game, but she hankered to be free, so she sawed her prison bars while her jailors smoked cigars, and beneath the midnight stars she went romping o'er the lea. Had she journeyed to the pen like a pious, moral maid, she would soon be free again, for the years so swiftly fade; and, her sentence being done, she could buy herself a gun and enjoy all kinds of fun, of the peelers unafraid. Now she is a hunted thing, like the coyote on the hill, while the weary years take wing, Clara will be hunted still; when her foolish head is gray she will dread the light of day, and the cop across the way will impart a deadly chill. Take your bitters when they're due, for postponement is no friend, though they be a ghastly brew, let the noxious draught descend; you may, with a heedless smile, dodge old Nemesis a while, but the bitters, sour as bile, must be taken in the end.

TESTIMONY TAKEN IN CASE AGAINST MICHIGAN "REDS"

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The taking of testimony for depositions in the case of the state of Michigan against the Communists arrested several months ago after an alleged midnight meeting in the Michigan woods near St. Joseph, started today in the offices of Frank P. Walsh with the testimony of Tony G. Opolski.

The depositions were taken so that evidence may be presented before the court when William Z. Foster, noted labor agitator, and other alleged members of the Communist party are placed on trial.

Opolski testified that he was a member of the department of justice at the time of the raid and that he was employed as an operative by the Sherman private detective agency. He held membership in the organiaztion of the Russian Workers. Opolski refused to answer questions concerning the raid on the ground that he might incriminate himself.

HIGH SCHOOL BETTER FILMS COUNCIL URGED

English Classes Asked To Study Pictures With A Critical Eye And Recommend Good Ones

A better films committee to be organized in connection with high school English classes is advocated by State Director of Education Vernon M. Riegel. The duty of such a committee would be to review moving picture exhibitions once a week and to submit a report. This report is to be posted on the high school bulletin board, according to the suggestion, for the guidance of all high school pupils.

A critical study of the pictures with reference to the general theme, the handling of the plot, the competency of the cast and the character of the photography is asked for. Wholesomeness of theme is to be a major consideration.

Just as the school undertakes to develop an appreciation of good literature, so may it hope to train toward an appreciation of good motion pictures, in the opinion of the State Director. "A large share of the youth are going to be more or less regular movie-goers; the practical thing is to make this attendance more discriminative," he asserts.

LOCAL HARDWARE DEALERS WILL GO TO CONVENTION

John Gray and Mrs. Mabel Boyd Norris, of the Gray Hardware store, and Walter Fairall, of the Gray hardware store in West Lafayette and a few other hardware dealers in this city are planning to attend the convention of the Ohio Hardware Dealers Association which will be held in the Hollenden hotel in Cleveland from February 13 to February 16.

It is likely that the Central hardware and Hawthorne's hardware stores will be represented, along with the two Gray hardware stores.

Mrs. Mable Boyd Norris is the only woman on the program at the convention. Mrs. Norris will read a paper entitled, "What Office Management Means to the Success of Hardware Business." Her part on the program comes on Friday morning. Her paper will be followed by the question box.

Among the important speakers at the convention will be Newton D Baker, former secretary of war during ex-President Wilson's administration; William Burrows president of the National One-Cent Letter Postage Association, Martin L Pierce of the Hoover Suction Sweeper Co, of Canton, and John W Gorby, of the Cyclone Fence Co, Waukegan, Ill

This is the thirtieth annual convention of the hardware men of this state

Owing to the absence of George Gray, secretary of the Ohio Hardware Mutual Insurance Co, which is connected with the Ohio Hardware Dealers Association his son Gorley Gray will read his report at this convention

Mr Gray left recently on a western trip to the coast and will make addresses before six different state hardware conventions. The addresses will be made at: Denver, Colo; Boise City Idaho; Spokane Wash; Portland Ore; San Francisco and Fullerton, Calif

ENGLISH BEER DRINKING CUT BY HIGH PRICE

Consumption Reduced 50 Per Cent In Last Four Years Due To Economic Cause

CAN'T AFFORD IT

High Taxes, Low Wages, Lack Of Work, Not Temperance, Believed Reason

By LUTHER A. HUSTON.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—High taxes, low wages and unemployment are making Great Britain temperate.

Statistics issued by the Brewers' Society show that in the last four years consumption of beer in England has decreased 50 per cent. This has not resulted from any growth of teetotalist sentiment among King George's subjects, but is due entirely to the fact that the average Briton cannot afford to drink as much beer as he formerly consumed

In 1918 England poured 36,000,000 barrels of beer down its thirsty gullets In 1920 the consumption had decreased by 10,000,000 barrels to 26,000,000, and in 1921 a further drop of 3,000,000 barrels is recorded, with a total consumption for that year of 23,000,000 barrels The year just closed, however, almost gave the brewers heart failure, for the sturdy Englishmen—and women—curtailed their consumption of the brew to 18,000,000 barrels

Taxes Multiplied.

Perhaps the main answer to the question is found in the fact that, compared with pre-war taxation, the duty on beer is thirteen times as great as it was before the Germans started the big scrap. The brewers, generous - hearted souls though they may be, do not feel that they should pay this thirteenfold increase in taxes out of their own pockets. They have added a few shillings to the cost of each barrel of beer to the consumer, and the thirsty Cockney finds himself unable to quench his thirst with the frequency or the volume that was his wont.

The fact that more than 1,000,000 persons are out of work in England has been an undoubted contributing factor to the decline in beer consumption. The added fact that wages paid workmen have not increased as rapidly as the cost of necessities of life is another element mitigating against the prosperity of the brewers

Beer Still High.

Cheaper materials, except hops, have not decreased the manufacturing cost sufficiently to warrant the brewers reducing the price of their product

A more or less anomalous situation has arisen out of the beer dilemma The object of the Government in imposing heavy taxes on intoxicants was to increase the revenue of the realm. It has worked just the other way

In 1920 the Government's revenue from the beer tax was 123,000,000 pounds. The estimated revenue for 1922 is 90,000,000 pounds, or a drop of 33,000,000 pounds in two years And the brewers say that the Chancellor of the Exchequer may not get his 90,000,000 pounds for 1922, as that is an estimated figure only.

The brewers declare that Britons will not get back to a pre-war beer basis until the government reduces the duties on beer. "Prohibition by dearness,' they declare, is an imposition upon the people that must be rectified by legislation.

Accordingly there is now in progress, a vigorous campaign for the reduction of the beer tax, and it is reported the movement has found favor with an increasing number of members of Parliament. It is not unlikely that before statistics for 1923 become available the tariff on the amber brew will have been reduced, and Britons once more will be hitting their pre-war stride in the consumption of beer.

CLOSE PROGRAM FOR COLLEGE FARM WEEK

List Of 233 Events, Set for 55 Schedule Hours Will Make Pamphlet Of 20 Pages

Two hundred and thirty-three lectures and demonstrations; two statewide shows of farm products; three educational exhibits, of poultry, of power machinery and of country newspapers; and seventeen meetings of state farm organizations—these comprise the program of farmers' week, 1923, sent to the printer from the Ohio State University here today. It will make a pamphlet of 20 pages.

Farmers' week this year is set for the last three days of January and the first two days of February. It opens at 9 o'clock on the morning of Monday, Jan. 29, and closes at 10 o'clock on the evening of Friday, Feb. 2. The first event is a demonstration in judging dairy cattle, and the closing event is a contest to determine the champion old-time country fiddler of Ohio

In the 35 schedule hours intervening will be crowded between four and five talks, demonstrations, reports, entertainments, farm tours, and recreation periods an hour The recreation periods are to be held daily in the University armory from 6 to 7 p m., with half the floor roped off for those who want to prance the old square dances to fiddle music, and the other half for those who prefer group games.

This will be the eleventh annual farmers' week held by the college. All events are entirely free. Last year, the registration of farm visitors was 6,120.

LAST OF KOEHLER'S ALLEGED SLAYERS IS NOW ON TRIAL

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29.—Trial of Charles Mithoofer one of the three Cleveland highwaymen accused of murdering Patrolman G. P Koehler here last November, started today.

The day will be spent in selecting a jury

Loomie Cummins found guilty about midnight Sunday of first degree murder with a recommendation of mercy for the killing of Officer Koehler, is expected to be sentenced to life imprisonment in a day or two.

Stanley Forbes is in the penitentiary awaiting electrocution following conviction of murdering Koehler.

MISSING WITNESS IN KLAN MURDER IS FOUND MONDAY

BASTROP, La., Jan. 29. — Harold Teegerstrom has been found.

Today, the missing state witness in the investigation of the hooded mob murders of Morehouse parish, for whom a country wide search has been conducted, appeared on the streets of Bastrop as nonchalently as tho nothing had happened.

No flurry of excitement marked his coming. He drove into town and greeted his friends. They asked no questions other than how he had been getting along. After spending a short time in Bastrop, he left to call on his father, and brother, who "have felt no worry over his welfare."

When asked where he came from, Teegerstrom refused to answer and declared he would not be interviewed concerning his actions. Valuable evidence, which it is said, the defense refused to expose during the one-sided hearing, will remain a secret until the grand jury convenes He is then expected to testify in favor of T. Jeff Burnett, now facing murder charges in connection with the death of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards His story is expected to strengthen Burnett's alibi, which the state declares has been completely shattered.

Friends of the star witness momentarily expect his arrest as a result of the warrant issued for him during the open hearing as a "material witness" They declare that he will give bond immediately and then return to his duties at the Southern Carbon plant

The state announced at the hearing that no charges were against Teegerstrom, but that his evidence was valued high. He kept the books which it is claimed will show that Burnett was at work on the night of the double murder.

He is said to have been in this vicinity during the entire hearings. Few persons believed that he had met with a fate similar to that of Daniel and Richards The search for him extended to Pennsylvania and New York.

LOCALS NOSE OUT PLEASANT CITY'S SQUAD

Win By Single Point; Will Play Ten Games At C. H. S. Gymnasium

After losing Friday night's game at Strasburg by a score of 33 to 23, the Coshocton High school basketball aggregation turned the tables on the Pleasant City five at Pleasant City, Saturday night. The score was 16 to 15.

Pleasant City made a determined effort to defeat the wreckers of their long string of victories in two seasons. The Citizens brass band was at the game to enliven the occasion.

Within one minute time after Referee Pollack, of Muskingum College blew the whistle for the start of the game, Troyan caged the ball for Pleasant City, their only basket in the initial half. Purcell made good on two free throws and the Coshocton lads set a merry pace and piled up a 12 to 3 lead at the conclusion of the first half.

The Coshocton defense was superb and the P. C.'s found it impossible to penetrate it successfully.

The second period opened with a rush and the C. H. S. boys began to show somewhat the strain of two hard road games in two successive nights. The locals weakened and allowed the home team to tie the score 12 to 12

For several minutes the score remained a tie. Purcell broke the monotony when he caged two free throws. Troyan gave Purcess the opportunity to make the free throws when he fouled under Coshocton's goal. Troyan redeemed himself later. He leaped into the air, took the ball from Center and basketed it. It tied the score again 14 to 14.

Umstot fouled again in Coshocton territory and Purcell made a free throw. Wagner fouled in midfloor and Gander tossed in the final counter with five seconds to go. Pleasant City fought desperately to regain the lead but the timer's whistle settled the game in favor of Coshocton.

The locals will play ten games on their home floor before going out on the road again. This week's schedule of games is rather heavy. Frazeysburg comes here on Friday night and New Philadelphia is here on Saturday evening at Grace M. E. church gym.
